DIPLOMATS WAIT MAJOR DEVELOPMENTS

Foresee Action on Expected Italian Surrender, Mending of Russian 'Breach.'

BERLIN NEWS WATCHED

Conference of U. S., British Leaders Will Come Soon, Belief.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Diplomats in the capitals of the Allied world today were of the opinion that rapidly-moving military and political developments have made necessary another meeting between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in the near future.

Their views were strengthened by occurrences and reports from scattered European sources, which, when pieced together can mean only that momentous developments are in the offing.

Any one, or a combination of the following three possibilities would be ample reason for the leaders of the two English-speaking allies to get together to further chart their course toward victory:

1. The expected "unconditional surrender" of Italy to the Allies.

2. Allied action to mend a possible breach in the solid four-power front evidenced by recently-reiterated public demands by Russia for a "second front" in western Europe.

3. Military and diplomatic offensives to be taken should reports of Hitler's fall from power prove well-founded.

In Washington, President Roosevelt, just returned from a vacation in the Canadian waters of Lake Huron, summoned his leading information specialists to an extraordinary White House meeting.

Mr. Roosevelt also talked at length with Army Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and British Ambassador Lord Halifax.

Halifax, upon leaving the White House, termed reports of Hitler's removal from power as "loose speculation" and said that even

'Gestapo Tactics' Of Police Visit Hit By Novelist

DANBURY, Conn. — (U.P.) — Rose Wilder Lane, novelist, said today it was important for Americans to know "what is going on" in America when police are permitted to "frighten people in their homes."

Mrs. Lane said she personally was not alarmed when a state policeman came to her home recently to check her identity at request of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, but added there were thousands of other Americans who would feel otherwise.

"I don't think this should be done by the American police," Mrs. Lane asserted in commenting on the incident which arose after she sent a postcard to Samuel Grafton, New York radio commentator and newspaper columnist, disagreeing with his views on social security.

"I said in my postcard that Germany had had so-called social security, which is nothing more than enforced insurance, for 70 years and that national socialism had wrecked Germany and made Hitler possible," Mrs. Lane explained.

Mrs. Lane has written a pamphlet entitled "What is This The Gestapo?" in connection with the incident.

HE'S IMPRESSED

Standley Says Red War Plants Good, Food Plentiful.

MOSCOW — (AP) — Russian war plants "compare favorably" with those in the United States, according to Admiral William H. Standley, U. S. ambassador, who has just completed a four-day tour of inspection of Soviet tank factories and steel mills in the Ural mountains industrial region.

Standley said food was abundant wherever his party went.

It's Primary Day But City Draws 'Bye'

Six Nearby Communities March to Polls But Not Mansfield.

While Mansfield went about its business as usual today, 74 Ohio cities and villages, including six in Richland and nearby counties, went to the polls to choose party candidates for municipal offices in the November election.

Mansfield got by without a primary this time by permission of the secretary of state after the June filing of candidate petitions showed there would be no contest on either ticket. It was the first time in years that the city has held no May or August primary.

Voting is expected to be light throughout the state since few cities have heated primary battles. Light votes will push the primary cost up, and in Galion where the Democrats had two contests to decide the cost was expected to reach $2 a ballot. Only contests in the Crawford county city are for solicitor and First ward council.

Shelby, with only one contest, is the only Richland county community which voted today. Primary ballots were cast in Willard, Crestline, Bucyrus, Galion, and Mt. Vernon. Ashland was without a contest and held no primary.

Shelby's lone contest is for Second ward councilman where Chester A. Bell, Walter Mathias, and John Yockey are candidates. Shelby operates under a charter government and votes in a non-partisan primary, the two candidates who receive the greatest number of votes appearing on the November ballot.

The Richland county board of elections will move to the scene of its work tonight instead of following its usual procedure of tabulating the votes at the courthouse.

Board members will be guests of George Williams, Shelby member of the board, at dinner at his home and then they will go to the Shelby city hall to do their tabulating which is expected to take only a short time.

Richland county townships and villages, which will join the cities in electing officials in November, nominate their candidates by petition if they have less than 2,000 population.

DAVIS REPORTS

Insists Nazi Land Forces Must Be Defeated.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Director Elmer Davis of the office of war information is convinced, after a three-week tour of the European war theater, that it will take more than mass air poundings to beat Germany.

"The German land forces have got to be beaten decisively before the war will be over," he told a news conference yesterday. "Until that German army is good and licked, the war won't be over."

In that connection the OWI chief predicted the opening of a "third front" by the Allies in western Europe—he termed the fighting in the Mediterranean area a second front — but he wouldn't venture to guess when or where.

Producer Charges Dowling Failed To Learn Lines.

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Saul Heller, Cleveland summer stock producer, has charged in a report to Actor's Equity association that stage star Eddie Dowling read his part in "Petrified Forest" during a recent Cleveland run, Heller revealed today.

Dowling, Heller charged, read his part the entire week although he had been engaged to play the role three weeks previously.

NAMES CAREY

FDR Picks Successor to Gentsch on Revenue Job.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — President Roosevelt has given Thomas M. Carey, board of elections clerk at Cleveland, a recess appointment as collector internal revenue for the 18th Ohio district.

Carey, a Democrat, will replace Frank F. Gentsch who has resigned as collector for the northeastern Ohio district which includes 22 counties.

Up And Up Comes Normandie From River Grave

The greatest salvage job in naval history is nearing completion as the 79,280-ton hulk of the U. S. Lafayette, the former luxury liner Normandie, elevates herself out of her muddy grave in the Hudson river. When the two sailors in the small motor craft measured the gauge at the prow it was 36 degrees. It must achieve an angle of 45 degrees to be able to clear the river and enable it to be swung around straight in its berth.

WEEKLEY'S CASE NEARING CLOSE

Witnesses For Former School Head Testify They Heard Doctor's Statements.

With the testimony of 14 witnesses already presented to a common pleas court jury of seven women and five men, plantiff's attorneys in the Weekley-Reed slander case indicated at noon recess today that they had nearly completed their case.

As the trial entered its second day, witnesses for the plaintiff continued to testify as to malicious and slanderous statements made by Dr. John A. Reed concerning Willard S. Weekley, former superintendent of Butler schools, in spite of the defendant's denial of these statements when he took the stand yesterday afternoon on call of Weekley's attorneys.

Dr. Reed, round-faced, white-haired and partially deaf, forced attorneys to shout their questions. Unable to hear objections of his own attorneys, he proceeded to answer questions they op-

BUS FARE CUT

Toledoans Get Second Saving In Four Months.

TOLEDO — (AP) — Another automatic streetcar and bus fare reduction, the second in four months, was announced today by the Community Traction company here. It will save Toledo passengers $12,000 a month, E. L. Graumlich, transit commissioner, estimated.

The new rate of eight cents will go into effect Aug. 31, replacing the present fare of nine cents and three tokens for 25 cents.

SMACK BURMA

U. S. Bombers Strike Hard At Jap Communications.

NEW DELHI — (AP) — American medium bombers struck hard at Burma's communications by bombing ports and railroads yesterday, a United States army communique said today.

Mitchell bombers of the Tenth air force scored direct hits on the Irrawaddy river ports of Katha and Bamo, doing particularly heavy damage at Katha. All of the bombers returned safely.

TALKS POST-WAR

FDR Meets With Hull, Advisors on Plans For Future.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Roosevelt arranged a conference today with his state department advisers on post-war planning, headed by Secretary of State Hull.

The others attending were undersecretary of State Welles, Chairman Norman Davis of the Red Cross, Dr. Isaiah Bowman of Johns Hopkins university, and Dr. Leo Pasvolsky, special assistant secretary of state in charge of post-war planning.

Dr. Bowman, vice president of the National Acadmy of Sciences, was chief American territorial specialist at the Paris peace conference in 1919, while Pasvolsky is specialist in post-war planning.

BREAK IT UP

M. P.'s, Shore Patrol Disperse Angry Service Men.

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — A crowd of more than 200 service men who milled around the northeast corner of city hall early today threatening to "get" a city policeman who had been involved in a scuffle with a marine was dispersed by military police and navy shore patrolmen.

Hint Of Boals To Officers Brings 7 Speeding Arrests

A friendly hint to city traffic patrolmen from Traffic Commissioner Frend C. Boals that there was too much speeding on Mansfield streets brought quick results last night when police arrested seven drivers for speeding and another for driving alone with a temporary permit.

Four of the seven speeders were apprehended on Lexington avenue and two on Sturges avenue south of Glessner.

Arrested on Lexington avenue for driving at speeds ranging from 48 to 52 miles an hour were Guy E. Snyder, Columbus; Robert M. Sellers, Lexington, R. D. 1; Earle Gibson Truesdale, Painesville, and W. Harold Freese, 292 Second avenue. Snyder, Truesdale, and Freese posted $16.30 each and signed waivers, while Sellers pleaded guilty in municipal court this morning and was fined $10 and costs.

Cited on Sturges avenue for driving 40 miles an hour were Mrs. Hazel A. Hilborn, 593 Cook road, and Alton R. Ackerman, Fredericktown, R. D. 3. They

CONFUSION OVER ORDINANCE ENDS

Council To Have Measure on Fund Depository as It Studies Pay Boosts.

Confusion over the selection of a depository for Mansfield city funds for the next two years apparently was cleared up today when City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner announced he had drawn up legislation for council action tonight which would divide the funds between two banks.

Council is scheduled to resume its study of the request of city employes for a $35 monthly pay raise when it meets tonight, but there were indications that the increases, if granted, will not be as much as the employes asked for.

Councilman C. N. Shultz, chairman of the council committee to study the request, said he had obtained salary figures from other

Seven From City Attend Legion's War Conference

The war conference of the Ohio Department of American Legion at Cincinnati entered its third and final day today with Commander C. O. Lister and seven other delegates from McVey post among those in attendance.

Lee Pennington, assistant director of the FBI, told the Legionnaires that the seriousness of the "horseplay" of war plant workers was not realized. He asserted it was a greater menace than sabotage.

Pennington warned against "maudlin sentimentality" and declared he would "like to see Rome, Tokyo and Berlin in smoking ruins if it would save one life in this country."

Cautioning against over-optimism, Brig. Gen. Robert L. Denig of the U. S. Marine corps, a native of Sandusky, O., told the group that after 20 months of fighting we have only paved the way for what is to come.

Declaring that the "treacherous nature of all Japs is well known," the conference today adopted a resolution condemning the release of American-born Japanese from relocation camps to work on farms.

The resolution, adopted with only one dissenting vote, said "this practice of our government creates a hazard and disrupts civilian morale."

ITALY AGREES TO FIGHT ON, SAYS REPORT

London Hears Germany Sends 500,000 Men Over Alps, Panzers Into Greece.

TERMS TOO STIFF

Badoglio Believed Maneuvering To Get Allies To Give His Nation Old Boundaries.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Italo-German conferences at Verona have ended with Italy giving assurances she will fight on, at least until the Allies offer more lenient peace terms, an Italian frontier dispatch said today.

European advices, meantime, asserted Germany has sent 32 additional divisions—nearly 500,000 men—into Italy and four Panzer divisions to Greece in anticipation of Allied invasions when the conquest of Sicily has been completed.

Though reports that Adolf Hitler has been deposed appeared without foundation, the London Daily Telegraph said in a dispatch dated "somewhere in Europe" that all parts of Germany expected a military dictatorship to be established "within one or at least two months."

The latest in a series of unconfirmed rumors to reach Madrid was that Hitler already is being held a virtual prisoner under military escort at Berchtesgaden, his Bavarian mountain-top home, but this rumor was suspect, too.

Italian frontier reports said German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German armed forces, wound up their conferences with Italian Foreign Minister Raffaele Guariglia and Gen. Vittorio Ambrosio, Italian chief of state, late yesterday.

Guariglia and Ambrosio were reported to have given Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio's promise that Italy would live up to the tri-partite pact for the present, but added that the talks would not be considered conclu-

ASKS TAX CUT

Legislator Says Bricker Underestimated Revenue.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — State Rep. Howard M. Metzenbaum, Cleveland Democrat, today made public a letter requesting Gov. John W. Bricker to call a special session of the Ohio legislature to consider reduction of the sales tax from 3 to 2 per cent.

The letter asserted the governor indicated in the latest budget submitted to the legislature that the sales tax would produce $11,000,000 in 1943 and $36,000,000 in 1944, but that these figures under-estimated revenues by "many millions of dollars."

"The treasurer reports that total sales tax collections for this year, as of July 17, are $565,604 greater than for the same period last year," Metzenbaum wrote. "On that basis, the surplus at the end of 1943 will be $18,646,798 greater than the budget estimate. At the end of 1944, the surplus will be $41,646,798."

CHANGES NAME

Italy Re-titles Battleship, And Destroyer.

(By Associated Press)

The Berlin radio reported today that Italy, continuing her campaign to abolish all Fascist names and emblems, had changed the name of the 35,000-ton battleship Littorio to the Italia.

The 1,620-ton destroyer Camicia Nera (blackshirt) also has been renamed the Artiglieri, said the broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press.

DRIVE FOR FISHING TACKLE

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — (U.P.) — While not fighting, the American Legion and the Red Cross see no reasons why the armed forces of the Navy and Marines shouldn't do a little deep-sea fishing. They have launched a drive for the collection of all deep-sea fishing tackle now lying idle in basements and attics.

Plunge Ahead For Showdown Near Randazzo

Retreating Nazis Blow Out Whole Sides Of Mountains In Efforts To Slow Drive; Prisoner Toll In Yanks' Raid Climbs To 1,500.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa — Retreating German troops have begun wholesale demolition of communications in northeast Sicily, impeding but failing to check a general Allied advance which effected a junction of the American Seventh and British Eighth armies between Randazzo Pass and the center of the line.

Seventh and Eighth army columns driving against Randazzo, key junction dominating the narrow defile between Mt. Etna and the Caronian range, met west of the pass and plunged in today for a showdown battle expected to seal the fate of the cornered defenders of Sicily.

The junction of the American and British spearheads was believed to have cut off unknown numbers of German troops making a sacrificial stand before the mouth of the pass, one of the most vital Sicilian objectives remaining in Axis hands.

The hard-pressed Germans, struggling to slow down the Allied advance in all sectors, started a campaign of blowing up roads on a scale never before witnessed in the Sicilian campaign, which went into its second month today.

Dynamite blasts in the wake of the Nazi withdrawal sent whole mountainsides crashing down on the roads. The Germans evidently realized that they were nearing the end of their fighting days and were embarking on an extravagant policy of demolition.

The only conquest of a town reported today—the capture of Pedara, five miles inland from Acireale by British forces straightening out their lines along the eastern seaboard—was no barometer of the steady Allied gains promising final victory within a matter of days.

On the north coast the left wing of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Seventh army forged ahead and was estimated to have reached a point less than five miles west of Capo D'Orlando.

It was west of the cape that the Seventh army with U. S. Navy assistance turned the German flank Sunday morning in a landing now revealed to have been on a much larger scale than first indicated. The original number of 300 prisoners captured by the Americans in the amphibious foray was boosted to 1,500, most of whom were described as Italians.

The Seventh army was estimated to have advanced more than 120 miles and the Eighth army more than 80 since they stormed the Sicilian beaches a month ago.

The junction between the British Eighth army and the U. S. Seventh army troops came between Bronte and Troina as Axis forces took desperate measures in their failing efforts to hold the Allied advance.

There was no definite estimate of the number of Germans trapped by the junction between the Allied armies west of Randazzo but the speed of the drive indicated a break in the German ability to hold much longer.

A communique from the headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower confirmed the capture of Bronte, only nine miles from Randazzo, by a British Eighth army spearhead closing in around the road encircling Mt. Etna.

Northward, the communique said, the American Seventh army, aided by knife-wielding French Moroccan Goums, "have continued to press eastward." The Yankee units were past Cesaro, only 12 miles west of Randazzo.

The position of the German and Italian forces "becomes daily more difficult," the communique said.

"Heavy demolitions, rugged country and lack of roads tends to slow up movement," it added. "The enemy is using every device to hold up the relentless advance of our forces."

Seizure of Randazzo would sever the Axis communicating road between the north and east coastal routes over which the Axis troops are retreating and would join the British and Americans only 40 miles southwest of Messina.

British warships bombarded the eastern coastal road twice last week-end, it was revealed, while Allied aircraft heavily pounded Messina, the main Axis escape

IN RANGE: Soviets Train Big Guns On Kharkov, Foe Groggy

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—Kharkov, third largest city in Russia, was reported within range of the Red army's heavy guns today as the fast-moving Soviet forces stepped up their assaults on the Ukrainian city and also on the big German base at Bryansk, 250 miles to the north.

One Soviet column has driven to a point 30 miles to the northwest of Kharkov while a second is within 12 miles of the city on the north and there are evidences that the groggy German army is beating a hasty retreat, a Russian war bulletin said.

The situation, the Russians declared, was similar in the north where the spearhead of the Red army had covered one third of the 75-mile distance between Orel, the German base which fell last week, and Bryansk.

(The German radio, admitting the Red army was attacking in force, also disclosed the Russians had launched an offensive in the direction of Smolensk, 150 miles northwest of Bryansk. The Russians made no mention of this latest operation in the midnight communique.)

The Kharkov assault resulted in the capture of more than 100 villages, the Russian communique said. Indications that the German forces were retreating in some disorder were seen in the Russian report of the capture of 212 tanks,

PLASTERED: Four Jap Bases Hit By 224 Tons Of U. S. Bombs

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC —Bombers ranged the whole length of the southwest Pacific battle area yesterday, dropping 224 tons of bombs on four Japanese strongholds—Vila, Salamaua, Bairoko and Amboina.

There was no attempt at interception by enemy planes.

The heaviest bomb loads were released on Salamaua and Vila, presumably the next major objectives of a two-pronged thrust directed at the great enemy base of Rabaul, New Britain.

Successive flights of Liberators roared over Salamaua, dropping 103 tons of bombs in 40 minutes. Heavy anti-aircraft fire met the first waves but when the last left the target area the airdrome, the town and harbor of this northwestern New Guinea base were obscured by clouds of smoke from fires and explosions. Damage was heavy, a headquarters communique said.

BRITISH STUDY CURE FOR LOST WORK HOURS

Issue 'Ten Commandments' To Curb 'Common, Often and Preventable Illness.'

(By International News Service)

LONDON — Because British workers are still losing about 22 million weeks work each year through "common and often preventable illnesses," authorities today issued ten commandments for good health in war-time.

If the work loss could be wiped out, it would be equivalent to the production of 24,000 more tanks, 6,750 more bomber planes and six and three quarter million rifles a year, the official statement said.

It listed the ten "golden rules for war-time health" as follows:

1. Be regular in your living habits.
2. Get enough sleep.
3. Get your share of air and sunshine.
4. Keep mind and body active.
5. Choose the right food.
6. Be moderate in drinking and smoking.
7. Don't worry; be kindly and tolerant.
8. Fight diseases; see your doctor.
9. Stop diseases from spreading.
10. Help yourself to be well; keep your mind and body in training.

The statement recommended eight hours sleep a night, said that those performing ARP duties at night should try to catch up on their sleep during the week. It declared that black-out should be arranged so that windows can be kept open and suggested walks, breathing exercises and various light gymnastics to counteract hours spent in offices, factories and other closed spaces by millions of workers today.

In suggesting relaxation and change for tired workers, the statement said that workers should try to think of something radically different from their everyday work, but declared it shouldn't be overdone.

On the food question, the statement recommended an intelligent interest in food, and went into detail about foods which are essential for good war-time health. Excessive smoking and drinking was strongly condemned, while attention was directed to the danger of venereal disease in war-time. Personal hygiene in the fighting of disease got a chapter to itself, with recommendations how to avoid infection.

DOG'S ADEPT IN HOTEL

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—(U.P.)—Speck, an English setter, was born in a hotel and has lived in a hotel all his life. He has never known the wide, open spaces and hence has learned only the tricks of hotel life. One of the first tricks he learned was to stand on his hind legs and push the button of the elevator. He belongs to Jack Mathews, general manager of the Knickerbocker hotel. Often elevators boys make a trip to the top floor of the hotel, only to find it is just Speck who wants to come down.

POP EYE GETS HIS 'SPINACH'

NATICK, Mass—(INS)—Pop Eye, an Irish setter, is doing fine now.

He was getting a bit thin, so his owner, Sumner D. Hersey, an OPA rent inspector, asked the Natick food rationing board for some replacement meat coupons. The board said "No."

News of the plight of Pop Eye got around. Mail began to arrive at the Hersey home. One letter included 80 points from an anonymous New Yorker, signed: "A sympathetic, patriotic American." Sixty points in coupons came from a woman in Kearneysville, W. Va.

The Forgotten Woman of World War II

● We all admire the important part being played in this war by the WACS, the WAVES, the SPARS and Women's Auxiliary groups.

We are quick to honor the heroism of our nurses at the war fronts . . . and to laud the women workers in war plants.

But well in the background, unnoticed and unsung . . . beyond the glamour and excitement of the uniform and the assembly line . . . there is another woman who is doing a magnificent war job.

She is the HOUSEWIFE—the "forgotten woman" of World War II.

An 8-hour day? She'd think it was Heaven! Working the "Swing Shift"? The babies see to it that she does! Hers are the endless tasks of caring for her home and her family . . . of solving the problem of shortages in food . . . packing lunch boxes . . . preparing tin cans and saving grease and scrap and paper . . . and more and still more.

You won't hear much about the American Housewife's contributions when it's over—that's why we felt somebody ought to do this bit of reminding . . . now.

HENRY PAULSEN, JR. WED IN FLINT, MICH.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Paulsen, sr., Beechwood Drive, Takes As Bride, Miss Maxine Helen Van Horn of Flint, Monday.

OF INTEREST to Mansfielders is the wedding solemnized last evening in Flint, Mich., uniting in marriage Miss Maxine Helen Van Horn of Flint and Henry J. Paulsen, jr., of Detroit, Mich., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Paulsen, 510 Beechwood drive, of this city. The ceremony was performed before a palm-banked candlelit altar which was decorated with white gladoli.

The Trinity Methodist church was the scene of the nuptials at 8 o'clock with Rev. John LaVan officiating in the presence of 150 guests.

For her wedding the bride wore a white satin gown, fashioned with low waistline, fitted bodice with lace outlining the sweetheart neckline, full skirt and long train. Her fingertip length veil was held in place by a pearl tiara. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom. She carried a bouquet of white roses which was centered with a white orchid.

Miss Betty Welch, of Flint, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing pink marquisette, pink picture hat and she carried a Colonial bouquet in the pastel shades.

Bridesmaids were Miss Martha Book and Miss Maxine Rogers, both of Flint. They wore pale blue marquisette with matching picture hats. Their bouquets were also of the Colonial style. Mrs. Van Horn wore a navy blue crepe ensemble for her daughter's wedding. Her accessories were white with a navy hat. Mrs. Paulsen's frock was light grey blue crepe with matching hat.

Following the nuptials a wedding reception was held at the church where the bridal party received their guests. Later refreshments were served in the social room with summer flowers and tall lighted tapers decorating the table. A large wedding cake formed a pretty centerpiece.

Later the newlyweds left for a trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls and will return to northern Michigan. They will make their home in Detroit. For traveling the new Mrs. Paulsen wore a light blue cablemesh two piece print frock with white accessories and a white hat. She also wore the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

Repose Is Necessary For Morale

By MME. QUI VIVE

It is not easy for the woman who is holding down the wife-and-mother job to find repose. It is particularly difficult these days with the scarcity of household help. But she must have it if she is to carry on her job, keep fit. Maybe she can snatch forty winks when the baby is having his nap. If not, she must pile into bed at a reasonable hour.

Before gas rationing started she could put the kids in a car, drive to some wooded spot, let the children run loose while she rested and basked in the sun. If she lives near a beach she can find relaxation on the sand. Should it happen that grandma is willing to look after the children for a few hours mama can beat it to the beautytorium. Nothing like going through the good looks hopper to put oneself together.

At all times she must do her work restfully, not get flurried. When she's played out it isn't sense to force herself to drudge. Instead of chasing the vacuum cleaner over the rugs she had better do her darning. Easier work gives her a chance to become composed.

In one way her job is lighter. She doesn't have to do much entertaining, prepare meals for guests.

Few women realize that the time comes when they must make readjustments in their lives. Usually they follow a routine. But there are days when they are not up to par, nerves arise to make them understand that they must pause, rest. Then the old routine won't do. It is better to forego the cleaning and indulge in recreation. It is better to have a little dust under the bed than to have mama in it with pains in her head and aches in her back.

The average housewife leaps out of bed at the baby's cry. She often thinks how grand it would be to pull herself together slowly in the morning, take time to reorganize her thoughts, stretch her body, have a nice yawn and regard the coming day. Well, she can her quiet hour at bedtime, when she can brush her hair, cream her face and complexion. She mustn't miss out on that. It is her reward for giving constant attention to her family.

A solitary walk soothes the spirits, gives an opportunity to commune with one's soul. Women are just finding out about the delights of walking.

Take long breaths all the way. Inhale for three steps, exhale for three. You'll not only chug up a healthy appetite, but you'll be doing a kindness to your muscles. The circulatory system will move briskly, with the result that the complexion will take on an attractive glow.

Set Example Of Affection For Animals

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

In summer there are more opportunities than at other times of the year to teach the child to be kind to animals. Thousands of children living in villages, towns and cities visit on farms. By example and precept, we parents can and should teach them to be kind to the birds and other creatures of the woods, field and farmyard.

Beginning with the tot, let us strictly forbid his throwing sticks and stones at any living creature. Many farm children not carefully trained will throw stones at farm animals to drive them. City children visiting the farm may do so more readily.

Then unguided children will set the dog on some of the livestock or run down a sheep or pig in hot weather. A child should be taught that a pig if run long will die.

Affection for Animals.

The boy or girl on the farm who has one or more sheep, pigs or calves of his own to raise can learn to cultivate a real tenderness for them. Some tragedies arise when the father takes a notion to slaughter one of these creatures for meat. Besides the disregard for the child's possession, there may be a terrible sorrow to him from having to see it slaughtered. Even though it might be slaughtered after being sold, the association so much more remote would be very different.

When such farm animals as horses are worked, the father's example in treatment of them largely determines the attitude acquired by his son. In my case, however, as a boy between 12 and 16, I never quite measured up to the standard set by my father in kindness to horses.

Doctor's Own Experience.

When I reflect on those years I sometimes feel a bit ashamed of my shortcomings. When I plowed or drove the horses in other ways in the field, I did not let them pause often enough for rest and cooling off. I was a bit too strong for action, continuous action. I used to object when my father insisted we walk up steep hills instead of riding in the wagon. But as Father always walked at such times, what else could I do but walk also?

My father's attiude revealed something in his character, for he was still more thoughtful to members of the family when they were tired.

Though a very occasional farmer will treat his livestock with more carefulness and kindness than his children or wife, most farmers who are very kind to dumb animals are also considerate of fellow human beings. Generally the attitude in a child or adult toward an animal carries over to his family and other people. If I were a young woman thinking of marrying a young farmer, I should want to be sure, among other things, that he was kind to the animals on the farm.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. We have a quiet period of two hours each afternoon when our three children from 7 to 11 must not use the radio but may read. Please send me a list of books they might borrow from the public library, in the self-addressed, stamped epvelope enclosed.

A. They were sent, gladly.

Q. Would you ever warn a child against dangers during an electric storm?

A. Yes; to avoid standing under or near a tree during the storm, but in a very calm, matter-of-fact way. If the youngster wished to run outside during an electric storm, I should have him wear rubbers or rubber boots.

Q. Please name a good game for the lawn or backyard to be played by a number of children, even of different ages together, from six to 18.

A. Croquet.

Q. With shortage of cans, is there another way to preserve sweet corn and string beans for the family next winter?

A. Yes; by drying them in the sun or stove. Mrs. Myers plans to do a great deal of such drying of sweet corn this summer from the garden we have planted and cultivated with our own hands.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

Mrs. C. W. Frickman, South Boulevard, was hostess to members of the Florence Welty Missionary society of the First Lutheran church Monday evening at her home. Assisting her were Mrs. Lester Sharrock and Mrs. Donald Moore. Nineteen members and six guests were present. Preceding the program the group enjoyed a wiener roast. Mrs. John Gensel was welcomed as a new member. Mrs. Sharrock presided for the business meeting at which time Miss Marie Hoover reported on the recent Lakeside summer school. Miss Betty Burgett was in charge of devotions. The Sept. 15 meeting will be with Mrs. M. D. Harnly, Park avenue west.

Whose Fault If Men Have Dumb Wives?

A curious letter came to me in the day's mail. A correspondent sent me the names of 20 men all of whom had achieved eminence in the professions, politics, arts or industry. One was a U. S. senator, and the list concluded with a cabinet member now deceased.

These men, many of whom were of the Horatio Alger type of hero, started from scratch, climbed their own pedestals, and made the world take account of them. Yet all had sons utterly unworthy of their fathers. More than likely, if these sons had not inherited wealth, they would have been warming park benches most of their lives.

The mildest of the charges brought against several was that they were playboys. Others were fashionplates, and such brains as they had, were devoted to a choice of apparel. In the more serious catalogue of offenses in their records were embezzlement, kleptomania, drunkenness, suicide, and murderer.

My correspondent who dug out all this interesting data, ascribed the failure of these distinguished fathers to produce worthy sons, to the brainless women they married.

The theory that sons inherit from their mothers and daughters from their fathers has been discussed pro and con endlessly. But it does seem that it's more than an old wives' tale that sons "take after" their mothers more. Color-blindness and haemophilia are two examples of many things we know that sons inherit only from their mother.

My reply to my correspondent is that the blame for the poor caliber of their sons rests, after all, upon the men. They make most of the proposals of marriage, and it seems that a man thinks more of beauty in a wife than he does of brains. Sometimes, he is fortunate enough to get both; but it's usually not to his credit, for chances are that peaches and creamy complexion, dark eyes and Betty Grable shape had to do more with his choice than the young lady's gray matter.

What would happen if all the men stopped giving beauty the first consideration? Well, all the Dumb Doras would concentrate on getting smart in mind instead of just in dress.

Women can be just as brainy as men want them to be. They are now.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I knew that on me alone, in the next few minutes—or perhaps seconds — rested the success or failure of my father's plan to find out what Ruth Hayes meant to do with the money which Olina had brought her from the bank. If Ruth should suspect that her plot had been discovered, she obviously would not go on with her scheme. Hence she would also avoid the trap which my father was setting for her that afternoon in Hal Meredith's office, where she was scheduled to appear for the purpose of attempting to blackmail the eminent alienist into getting from Katharine the whereabouts of her husband Jack Beckett.

Must Act Alone.

I knew that neither Dicky nor the guards would emerge from their posts behind the doors of rooms opening on the corridor unless I found myself unable to cope with Ruth Hayes and there appeared to be danger of her forcing Olina into her room. If possible, I must let no hint of any previous knowledge of Ruth escape me.

I hurried out of the "Exit" alcove and up to the two women facing each other in front of 1720. As I came toward them, I heard Ruth Hayes say sharply:

"You little idiot, what do you mean by yelling that way? Anybody would think you were afraid I was trying to compel you to come into my room."

Olina, I knew, had been instructed by my father on the answers she should make to anything Ruth might say, and her response came promptly.

Olina Apologizes.

"I'm so sorry," she replied penitently. "Of course I shouldn't have screamed, but you startled me by taking hold of my arm. I hate to have anyone touch me."

I had reached them by this time, and blinking my ostensibly sore eyes, I put a tremulous question:

"Did you want anything, ladies? I thought I heard one of you call."

"Yes," Ruth answered coolly. "I called. I wanted you to stick around here for a minute or two until I tell you to go away again."

She turned back to Olina.

"So you refuse to come into the room with me," she said.

"I'm sorry, but I must," Olina answered steadily.

"Then," Ruth replied, "there's nothing for me to do but take this bag into the room by myself, take out the things you have brought to me, and return you the empty bag. Will that satisfy you?"

A Sneering Reply.

Her words were a sneer, but Olina answered as if the question were a most courteous one.

"Perfectly," she said, and held the bag out to Ruth.

"Here is the key," she added, extracting it from her purse, and holding it out also.

"Thank you," Ruth returned perfunctorily. Then she turned to me.

"You stay right here till I call you," she ordered. "Then you come into the room, and I'll give you this bag to give to this young woman. I'll not be seeing you again," she said indifferently to Olina.

"But," Olina said breathlessly, and I knew that she was acting under my father's instructions, "haven't you any word for me from Georges?"

"You should have thought of that before!" the "Wilderness Woman" retorted, venom in her tones. "I certainly shall not discuss him out here. If you wish to come inside—" she paused, evidently with renewed hope of her ruse succeeding. But Olina's voice was firm.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but I cannot do that."

Closes the Door.

"Then stay out here, and exercise your imagination as to what Georges said to tell you," Ruth snapped and, bag in hand, went into the room and closed the door.

As soon as I heard the latch click, I spoke to Olina, prison-fashion out of the side of my mouth.

"Have you guards for the journey back?"

"Yes, plenty," she answered in a whisper. "One is riding up and down in the elevator, and there are others downstairs."

"Then the second I bring that bag out to you, go directly to the elevator and get out of the hotel as quickly as possible."

"I'll do that," she promised, and it was but a few seconds more before Ruth Hayes opened the door of 1720.

"Come in here!" she ordered me peremptorily.

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE THE VITAL PLAY

Concentrating on what is absolutely essential to the success of your contract, if you can figure out what is, will pay you handsome dividends in the long run. Many a player sees a number of plays which may contribute to the desired result, but does not realize that one of them is absolutely necessary, whereas the others come under the head of superfluities. So his trying of the unnecessary move causes him to fumble the vital one.

After West opened the heart Q to the K, South decided to ruff a club loser, and try to discard his heart by setting up a diamond. So he at once led the club 4 from dummy, and let East hold it with the Q. A heart return knocked out the dummy's A, and declarer's goose was cooked. He played to the club A, scored the diamond K and A ruffed the club 9 with the spade 7, ruffed a diamond with the spade 6 setting up two diamonds because the suit divided, but still could not use them. There was no use going to dummy with a trump to play them while East still had a trump for ruffing, so he scored four trumps and had to give up a heart at the end.

Keen analysis would have shown South that, after one heart top was out of dummy, the only chance for his contract was to find the diamonds divided evenly and to set them up before the other heart top was knocked out as a re-entry. Sure the opponents would whack at the heart again if they got the lead, he should not have let them get it until the diamonds were set up.

After taking the first heart trick, he should have scored his two diamond tops, then the spade A, K and Q, ruffed the diamond 7 with the spade 6, scored the spade J, led to the heart A, taken the remaining two diamonds for discards of one club and a heart, led to the club A and then given up a trick with his final club. Concentrating on the crux of the hand would have made his contract for him.

CHAPTER XXII

Meegan and Erica went into the tall apartment building together. The lobby soft with lamplight and the telephone operator greeted them pleasantly as they walked to the elevator.

On the fifth floor Meegan opened the door, stepped into the foyer and went into the living room that had the dusty, musty odor of an airless, unlived-in room. When she turned on the light, the room took shape and personality and color and she saw Erica glancing at the old, good furniture that was too massive for an apartment and at the pictures that were too large for apartment walls. It had long seemed to Meegan that their furniture longed to burst from its confinement and return to the high wide rooms of the house to which it had first been brought.

"I won't be long," she said to Erica. "Can I get you something to drink?"

"No, thank you," Erica said. And no doubt because she was feeling self conscious again she picked up a thick book that lay on the coffee table. "Who's been reading Omar Khayyam?" she asked.

Meegan glanced at the open bookshelves, seeing a thin gap like a missing tooth.

"I don't know." Someone had been in the apartment. The janitor had access but hardly an old colored janitor would pick up the Rubaiyat . . . And so that Erica should not see what she was thinking she walked toward the bedroom and said again, "I won't be long."

In the room that she shared with her mother she went quickly about getting a coat from a cellophane bag and two sweaters from a bureau drawer with the odor of moth balls . . . All the while thinking that someone had been in the apartment and knowing that neither her mother nor she had been in it since they left in May. Toby . . . Toby, of course. But would Toby return to read the Rubaiyat in a small and stifling apartment in midsummer? Someone had been with him. Clare . . . It had been Clare who had left the gap in the bookshelves because Clare never put anything back whence it came . . . How characteristic of her not to replace the book but to cast it aside when she was done with it.

She went into the living room again with the coat and sweaters over her arm.

"I'm going to the kitchen for a glass of water. Then we can be getting back."

"I'm in no hurry," Erica said. She glanced up, her eyes bright. "I love this, the Rubaiyat . . . There's a girl in the public library who suggested books to me. Funny, most of them don't say anything new. But they put your thoughts into words so much better than you can."

Meegan knew her understanding smile was feeble. Going to the white, anonymous kitchen she turned on the light and opened the compartment door and reached for a glass, seeing that of the many glasses on the shelf only two had been placed with their rims up. Only two glasses, different from the others when all of the glasses had been left the same. Clare and Toby had had drinks while one or the other had been reading the Rubaiyat.

She returned to the living room and to Erica.

"I'll give you a copy of that for Christmas," she said. But not this copy . . . Not this copy for Erica.

Erica got up and put the book back in place. "I didn't think I'd see you after we left the island."

"I'm leaving, too, you know. Of course we'll see each other."

"You and Adele. I'd like to see Adele. I'd like to see Toby, too. I thought he was interested in getting a job at the plant, but he hasn't talked about it lately."

"I hope he will talk about it again. I'm ready now."

Driving back to the island they talked about books, a safe subject. For a little while it was very pleasant indeed to be riding swiftly through the summer night talking about favorite books with Erica.

Then Erica said, "There's the island ahead. It looks . . . well, from here you'd think only happy things happened there."

"Like Utopia from here." Meegan took a deep breath. If only there was some way of not seeing Sue tonight . . . "I'm going next door to stay with Mrs. Van Nostrand's children tonight. So you needn't take me home."

"I don't think they'll be going tonight. She brought him home drunk again. But you never hear a sound. She doesn't quarrel with him or throw things as Helen would. I saw her through the window. She had her dinner alone and the candles were lighted and she had changed into a dinner dress. Is that what you call carrying on?"

Meegan said, "It is an impossible for Sue to throw things as it would be for you to bleach your hair."

Erica did not answer, for she was turning the car into the driveway. An instant later she gave the brakes her whole strength to avoid collision with another car that had been parked, lightless, in the driveway. Another car . . . Toby's car.

Simultaneously they looked into the windows of the lighted house, seeing Toby standing there. Though Helen was not visible, it was obvious that it was to her Toby was speaking.

Erica said, "I didn't know he was coming tonight," and her voice, usually low, was tense and a little breathless.

Meegan pushed down the car handle.

"Give him my love," she tried to say lightly.

"Won't you come in?"

"No. I must go directly over to Mrs. Van Nostrand's."

They got out together, Meegan standing for a few moments on the lawn while Erica hurried into the house. Standing in the semi-darkness and looking into the lighted house, she saw Erica enter the living room and with a quick, graceful gesture of her hand smooth down her wind-blown hair. Then she looked at Toby and smiled and there was all the tenderness in the world in her face . . . Toby stood still, his bad shoulder sloping beneath his well cut blue coat. He did not smile or say anything. He looked at her in a grateful, apologetic way.

Up Charles street . . . Down Charles street, she thought. What did it matter as long as there were tolerance and love and tenderness and gratitude and humility? Once upon a time it would have mattered. To some it would matter still, to some who would continue to live in a dead past. This changing world . . . Let it be changed, she thought, if there will be no more bars, no sharp lines of division drawn, no one side of the railroad track better than the other. Where men fight for their beliefs, there are no sharp lines of division drawn. They are equals and fighting for the same things.

But she began to distrust Toby's gratitude and humility as she crossed the lawn and pressed her fingers to the bell of Sue's house.

She did not wait. One never had to wait for Sue who loathed tardiness in any form. Sue, wearing a fresh tailored dress, opened the door. Since her dinner alone, Meegan thought, she had changed her dress.

"Hello, Meegan. Come in."

Meegan went in. "I know I'm late. But I had to go to town for things for Mother."

"It's all right, dear, because we're not going to the club tonight. I tried to get you on the phone to tell you but there was no answer at your house. Van's father is quite bad again and the children and I are driving in in a few minutes."

Sue was leaving Van . . . She was leaving him asleep and alone in the house . . . It was not true that Van's father had taken a turn for the worse . . . That was her excuse. And yet there was nothing in Sue's round, proud face or in her naturally supercilious manner to indicate the momentous decision she had made tonight.

Meegan said, "I hope it's . . . it's not too serious."

"It is rather, I'm afraid. I've packed the children's things and I've got to get them up. But I can manage. They'll go to sleep in the car."

"Is there anything I can do, Sue?"

"No. No, really. I'll attend to everything."

"I'm sorry. I'm terribly sorry."

Meegan walked to the door with an aching throat. Why didn't Sue cry? Why didn't she do any of the normal things a woman does when her marriage has failed and she is leaving her husband? But Sue was defending Van with her attitude. She loved him enough to defend him and lie for him. No matter how torn she was inside or the tears she was crying inside she would tell no one. She would tell no one that she tried to make her wifehood perfect because she had been certain that the influence of Clare would wane if there were nothing for which Van could reproach her. That was Sue, Meegan thought. Sue who by her determination for perfection hoped Van to love her and not Clare. That was Sue and all of the things that made her what she was. What was Clare and the things that made her what she was?

Standing by the door wanting to go and yet reluctant to go Meegan said, "I'm so sorry. I hope it won't mean that you won't be coming back for the rest of the summer."

There was nothing she could do or say, Meegan thought. She said good-night and walked down the path to the road, seeing Sue go upstairs, awaken the sleeping children and dress them with efficient hands while their little bodies were still limp from sleep. They would be well and warmly dressed when she brought them downstairs and carried them out to the car. Then she would go in, bring out the baggage and arrange it neatly in the trunk. She would drive away from the perfect house and the perfect life in which no one new was ever welcomed. And in the morning Van would awaken in an empty silent house and find a note written by a hand that had not lost its steadiness.

It was terrible to see a marriage fail. Somehow it was almost worse than when someone you have known for a long time dies. For while death is inevitable, the failure of a marriage need not be. And while death is silence, the failure of a marriage lives to speak of its own destruction in shoddy terms. Death is the end but the children of a marriage that has failed flourish with seeds of disillusionment.

Her steps lagged. The night itself seemed oppressive and the coat and sweaters on her arm burdensome. When she reached the house and went in, she saw the note her mother had written before leaving for the club. Her mother had gone out for the evening leaving half a dozen lights needlessly burning in the house.

She went to her room and closed the door. Now, she thought? Now? It could no longer be postponed and it was a privilege she would take. To cry . . . She almost ran to the bed and fell upon it and covered her head with a pillow . . . as if it would solve everything to leave anger and disappointment and pity and love as tears on her bed.

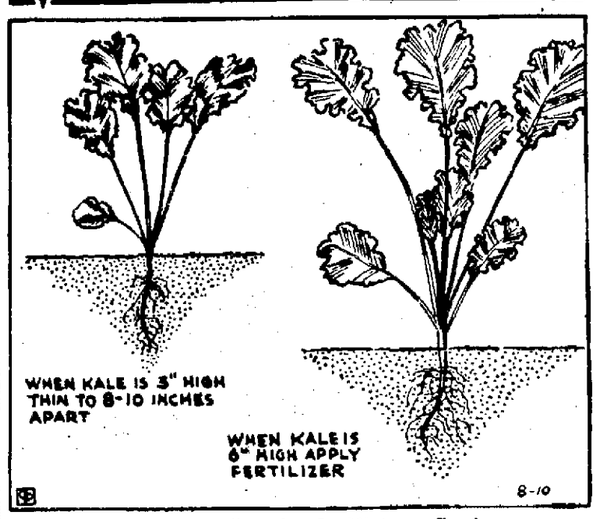
SKUNKS INSULTED

LOS ANGELES, Cal. —(U.P.)— Alexander O'Schickelgruber, a deodorized Brazilian skunk, belonging to Desmond Slattery, on the occasion of its first birthday, which happened to be the 54th birthday of its namesake, was shown a large picture of Adolf. Slattery affirms that the skunk displayed an air of great distress on thus encountering the portrait of another.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Kale Proving Popular In Victory Gardens.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Kale is becoming more and more popular among Victory gardeners, for it is a rather easy crop to grow and one which can be planted both early and late. For late plantings, the Siberian variety of kale is suggested, because it is extremely hardy.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, when Kale plants are about three inches high, thin them to eight or 10 inches apart. When the plants attain a height of six inches, a feeding of fertilizer will prove beneficial. Use about one-half pound to every 25 feet of row.

Weeds should be kept clear of kale plants and this calls for frequent cultivation, although this should be of the shallow type.

The entire kale plant can be cut and used, or just the larger leaves can be removed as they develop, in much the same way that Swiss chard is gathered. When small and green, the kale leaves can be used as a salad green, but later they are best cooked and served much as one would spinach or boiled cabbage.

CHOCOLATE BARS STAND THE HEAT

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—(U.P.)—Hot weather chocolate bars that will remain solid in temperatures up to 120 degrees Fahrenheit have been developed by the Quartermaster Depot here and chocolate manufacturers.

The average chocolate bar melts at 80 degrees and is a nuisance to troops in the tropics, the Quartermaster Corps says.

The new army bar is substantially the same as the old in taste. It is made of cholocate, sugar, skim milk powder, cocoa fat, oat flour, artificial flavoring and vitamin B. It weighs two ounces.

WOMAN HEADS CANDIDATES

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—(U.P.)—The dreams of a young Russian woman, Dr. Olga Alexander Gariaeff, 29, who was twice obliged to flee two war-torn countries, where she had already acquired the right to practice as a dentist, has just passed the California State Board of Dental Examiners, with the hightest average of 49 other candidates. She did another four-year course in American dentistry before being allowed to come up for examination.

'Roger' Takes Place Of 'Okay' With U. S. Airmen

LAGUARDIA FIELD, NEW YORK — (U.P.) — If you say "all right" or "o.k", instead of "Roger," you are out of step with the entire aviation industry in this country and Great Britain.

Capt. Ray Wells, chief pilot for the trans-Atlantic division of Transcontinental and Western, says there is common sense behind "Roger."

"'Roger,' as used in the current air communications code, means 'I have received all of your last transmission,' he explains.

"It was first employed in the navy years ago to identify the letter 'R' in the days when static made radio reception uncertain. Communications men would say 'R for Roger' when spelling out a difficult word over the radio just as civilians, talking over a telephone, might say 'S for Sam' or whatever pops into their heads.

"'Roger' was used after language and phonetic expects found it excellent for transmission purposes and less likely to be distorted by adverse reception conditions.

BRITAIN SEES RECORD HARVEST

LONDON—(INS)— This summer will see Britain's best harvest ever—if sufficient labor can be obtained before August for crop-picking—according to the Ministry of Agriculture.

Five hundred thousand extra harvesters are expected to turn out from towns and cities all over the country to help gather the nation's record yield. Thousands of troops, both British and American, will help in areas where they are stationed.

But warns the ministry, troops may not be available for harvesting during the entire season. A call has been issued to schools, factories, and city workers to lend a hand during vacations.

If you didn't happen to know that Ernie Pyle is "America's most widely read war correspondent," his column might give you the impression that it was written only for his home town paper. It's so personal—meaning it has to do mostly with the people who are our soldiers and sailors. Ernie Pyle tells you what you most want to know about them: what they're up against and how they're taking it; what they eat and what they say about it; what they laugh about and dream about and complain about. He knows, too. He's been through the mill with them. In fact he's still going through it. His column tells about it.

The News-Journal's third annual city tennis tournament is over, and has, I hope, served the wartime purpose for which it was intended, that of keeping the game and the division championships alive.

That it was an artistic success from the standpoint of quality of play can't be seriously questioned. No one ever expected it to be a roaring success in the matter of quantity—the number of entries. War industry, and long working hours in lines not directly connected with war work, combined to keep down entries in the senior divisions.

One of the purposes of the tournament was to create interest in the game among the younger racquet swingers, and in this respect the tourney proved a sad failure.

Only five boys and the same number of girls entered the two divisions. It is generally recognized that the presence of the defending champions, Norman Wilcox and Meredith Fisher, froze out the players who otherwise might have entered.

I fear there's a little bit of chicken in the hearts of the younger players. Certainly there are enough youngsters playing regularly to make up an interesting tournament.

Of course the youngsters should have boys' and girls' tournaments with a 15-year age limit, and junior tournaments at 18.

There's too much difference in the physical development of kids at 13 and 18 to make an interesting match, as the boys' finals between young Tom Bloor and Wilcox demonstrated.

Playing in their own age limits the younger kids might have had a full entry list for their divisions, but how big an entry list would there have been for junior play? The championships would just about have gone by default.

The city tournament this year probably came a little too early in the summer. With no further competition, play for the rest of the season can become anti-climax.

Some of the Maple Lake players have an idea to combat the anti-climax. They're thinking of forming a Maple Lake tennis club, and putting on their own tournament in all divisions. It's a good idea and can be put over if those sponsoring it are willing to do a lot of work in organizing the club immediately.

What tennis in Mansfield really needs is similar clubs at Johns and Liberty parks, and a summer long schedule of competition between the clubs. Players would welcome the championship competition of the city tournament. And entry lists would be big enough to make the whole thing worth while. It wouldn't be necessary to wait until after the war to form these groups.

The war has taken its first toll of Mansfield high school's fall crop of gridiron gladiators. Jerry Zeller, fullback, has enlisted in the coast guard and is awaiting call to service.

Coach Paul Snyder makes no secret that he was counting heavily on Zeller this autumn. "He showed last spring that he was just finding out what this football is about," Snyder declared, "and he looked the best of any of the boys in that spring game at Galion."

Snyder is now looking for another fullback, and is considering moving Mike Zivkoff or Dominic Musille into the spot.

KID M'COY STOPPED BY FRITZIE ZIVIC

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — Ringrusty after 17 months in the army, Sergeant Adam Panga, better known as Young Kid McCoy, was the latest victim today of veteran Fritzie Zivic, an old campaigner who made his 171st battle a successful one by stopping the soldier-boy in the fourth heat of last night's scheduled 10-rounder.

Referee Buck McTiernan halted the fight at 2:12, and led the battered McCoy to his corner to save him from more punishment at the hands of the sharp-shooting former welterweight champion. McCoy made two trips to the canvas for nine counts before McTiernan awarded the TKO to Zivic. Zivic, a 2-1 favorite, weighed 149½; McCoy 153.

Savold Wins on Knockout

Stops Lou Nova In Second at Chicago.

By TOMMY DEVINE

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Lee Savold, the blond punch-master from Paterson, N. J., today kept one of the prize ring's great winning streaks intact and sought ways to prolong it.

Savold, scored his fourth consecutive knockout victory last night at Wrigley field when he flattened Lou Nova of Van Nuys, Cal., in one minute and 40 seconds of the second round.

A crowd of 12,653 fans paid a gross of $45,959.63 to see Savold add to a winning streak that previously included Nate Bolden of Chicago and Lem Franklin of Cleveland, twice.

The end of the battle came with startling suddenness midway through the second round. After taking the worst of an exchange early in the round, Savold pinned Nova on the ropes in Lee's corner. He smashed a left hook to the stomach that caused the Californian to gasp audibly and then hammered a right directly under the heart.

When stung by the blow under the heart, Nova spun half-way around and then fell face down on the canvas. He twitched as the count reached seven, but couldn't make even an attempt to struggle to his feet. He remained flattened several seconds after Referee Tommy Gilmor finished the count.

"I fought exactly as I planned," Savold said happily in the dressing room after the bout. "I knew when I landed the left hook that Nova was finished. Then when I put across the right I was sure he'd never get up."

Savold was unmarked and hardly had worked up a "good steam."

The Paterson puncher was to leave Chicago today for a brief visit with his mother in St. Paul and then will take her east with him to see his new baby daughter, who was born yesterday morning. After a brief rest Savold expects to return here for another outdoor fight in September.

"They've promised to get either Tami Mauriello or Jimmy Bivins for that fight," Savold said. "It doesn't make any difference to me which one it is. I'm confident that I can beat either of them and reverse the decisions I dropped to them in Madison Square Garden last winter."

* * *

Promoters Jack Begun and Irving Schoenwald have made tentative overtures to Bivins and Mauriello. There appeared a better chance of getting the Cleveland Negro since Mauriello is tied up by Mike Jacobs of New York.

Joe Maxim, former Cleveland mitter now in the army and stationed at Fort Wayne, Ind., decisioned Bolden in a fast 10 round semi-final bout.

Fish Plentiful In Ohio Streams

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Fish are plentiful in Ohio streams despite high and muddy waters which has reduced the catch, the state conservation division reported today.

* * *

"Contrary to the belief that during high water small fish are washed down stream and disappear, fish management men have made checks to prove there are plenty of small fish in the streams following this year's hatch," said a department announcement.

E. L. Wickliff, assistant chief of the fish management section, said checks of a number of heavily flooded streams showed an abundance of small fish, including smallmouth bass, rock bass, longear sunfish, green sunfish and several species of minnows, suckers and darters.

These tests were considererd typical of conditions throughout the state and indicate "there will be a good survival of the 1943 hatch in Ohio's stream, all of which have been flooded since the spawning season," the department reported.

Ohio College Grid Ranks Sadly Depleted For 1943

By GRANT DILLMAN

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Ohio's uncertain 1943 football season slips into high gear next month, but at least a fourth of the state's 40 colleges will not be represented on the gridiron.

Twelve colleges, including six which always rank high in the standings, have dropped football for the duration because of player shortages and transportation difficulties. But there was a new note of hope today among colleges which will carry on.

Ohio's navy colleges—on paper at least—heretofore have been favored over army training schools because of the discrepancy between army and navy policy which permits navy trainees to play football but bans army students.

Army college coaches, after seeing the navy program in action over a period of months, apparently have decided, however, that the navy colleges won't reap the dividends they had hoped in the won and lost columns.

Army coaches reason that the value of navy trainees will be counterbalanced by the fact that the stay of each contingent on the campus is limited to three or four months.

Coaches who build their football squad around navy trainees, it was pointed out, may find the mainstays of their team transferred to some other school and themselves faced with the necessity of teaching their sistem to an entirely new crop.

Some navy coaches, as a consequence, have decided to depend on the same group of 17-year-olds and physically disqualified players available to army colleges.

Coach Stu Holcomb of Miami university, one of Ohio's eight navy colleges, put it this way:

"We have one civilian letterman back. We are a navy V-12 school and we have six of our old boys back with that group. But these navy boys are on strict schedules and if they don't keep up with their work they just can't play. In other words, it's going to be a nerve wracking season."

Other navy colleges in Ohio are John Carroll, which has abandoned football: Case, Baldwin Wallace, Denison, Ohio Wesleyan, Oberlin and Wooster.

Colleges which definitely have announced they will not play football include Toledo, Western Reserve, Ohio Northern, John Carroll, Youngstown, Cincinnati and Dayton, all consistent winners.

Smaller schools which have abandoned the sport are Kent State, Heidelberg, Ashland, Hiram and Marietta. Findlay also is expected to drop out and Akron has announced it will quit if the army ban is not lifted.

From the standpoint of returning players, Case seemed to be in the best shape. Coach Ray Ride has 15 men back from last year's squad, including Bill Eicher, all Big-Four wingback.

Coach George Gauthier at Ohio Wesleyan said 51 of 400 naval trainees on the campus have had football experience, but only 32 have said definitely that they will report. Gauthier said the next question is whether they will have time to play.

Xavier University Coach Clem Crowe reported that his prospective squad was composed entirely of 16 and 17-year-olds, many of whom had never played football.

Coach R. J. Kutler of Kenyon said he could count on a regular squad and one back who did not see service last year. The remainder of the Kenyon squad will be 4-F's and 17-year-olds, he said.

Ohio university will have none of last year's squad back, but Coach Don C. Peden is carrying on with the material at hand in hopes that the army may relax its regulations. Ohio U. has an air corps unit.

Bowling Green boasts only three lettermen and three reserves from last year, but one of the lettermen is Wayne Bordner, one of the state's best ends, who was reassigned to Bowling Green with a Marine unit.

Wilberforce's only holdover is Charles Waleston, an ordained minister, who will be surrounded at the tackle spot by 17-year-old freshmen.

Managers Retain Lead

Joe Mayer Takes Medal Honors With Par Round.

With each team scoring 3-1 victories, Managers retained their one game margin over Stewards for first place in the Moose golf league last evening at Coolridge.

Joe Mayer again set the scoring pace with an even par 34, while Ray Malaska and Matz Fisher had 35, Phil Schwaner 36, and Frank Jocha 38.

* * *

Pete Marcoff defeated Fred Huntsman in 10 holes after Huntsman missed a short putt on the ninth that would have decided the match.

Two Tied For Medal In Tourney

Eastern Youngsters Take Spotlight.

EVANSTON, Ill. —(U.P.)— The women's western amateur golf tournament today turned out to be a links show starring eastern shot-makers.

Two brilliant young eastern performers, Catherine Fox of Glen Ridge, N. J., and Kay Byrne of Rye, N. Y., tied for medalist honors yesterday with two under par rounds of 74 and in a three-way tie for the next spot was another easterner, long-hitting Dorothy Germain of Philadelphia.

Miss Fox and Miss Byrne had identical nines of 36-38 for their rounds yesterday. The former had five birdies dotting her card and the latter four.

Miss Fox' round was featured by her brilliant iron play. She was hitting her irons crisply and left four brilliant chip shots within three feet of the pin and then canned the shot putts for birdies. Her 74 coupled with a 78 in the qualifying round of the open won for her a special trophy presented in honor of the late Marion Miley.

Miss Byrne, recent winner of the New York state championship at Lake Placid, featured her round by a "shot for the books" on the 501 yard No. 6 hole. Here she put her drive behind a tree and then played a perfect "cut" shot out to reach the green and was down in two putts for a birdie four.

Tied with Miss Germain as the closest pursuers of the pace-setting duo were Claire Doran of Cleveland, O., and Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, Ill., the Illinois state titlist with cards of 78.

A stroke farther back was Neomi Copic of Toledo, O.

The qualifying "ceiling" was 85. Seven players tied for four places at that figure. The three hole survivors included Jean Hopkins of Cleveland.

Maple Lake Takes Title

Bob Regula Fans 24 In Shutout Victory.

Bob Regula pitched Maple lake to the Parks Association softball championship last evening with a 7-0 victory over Prospect in which he allowed only four hits, struck out 24 of the 31 batters to face him, and connected for the only extra-base blow of the game, a double.

It was a tight ball game for six innings, Maple scoring six of its runs in the last three frames.

Johns park edged North Lake 6-4 in a game limited to seven innings by agreement, while Cates won on a forfeit by John Todd.

Interest Gone From Flag Race

Needs Shot In Arm Like Buggy Needs Mare.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

THE major leagues need a miracle team right now just like a buggy needs a horse.

The baseball standings today show the St. Louis Cardinals in front of the National League by 13 games and the New York Yankees on top of the American League by nine.

Practically everyone is taking for granted that the pennant races already are over and in the absence of any proof to the contrary this seems to be a fair assumption.

But it was just about this time last year that the Cardinals began their amazing drive to overhaul the Brooklyn Dodgers and go on to beat the Yankees in the world series.

On this date a year ago the Redbirds were nine games back in second place, but starting on Aug. 11 they won 11 of their next 12 games and never let up the pressure. They showed what still could be accomplished in the remaining two months of the present season if there was any challenger of the 1942 Cardinals' calibre around.

In the National League this year the Dodgers, of course, already are out of the running and neither the second place Pittsburgh Pirates nor the third-place Cincinnati Reds are manned strong enough for a sustained drive even if the Cardinals should crack.

The distance between first and second in the American League is not so great and the Washington Senators have surged back into second place by winning nine of 11 games. Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland all are closer to the Yanks than the second place Pirates are to the Cardinals. But all of them have had earlier chances to make their bids and have failed.

* * *

Opportunity will be knocking for the last time as the teams embark on another intersectional series this week, starting with a pair of games in the American League—New York at St. Louis today and Boston at Chicago tonight.

All clubs were idle yesterday.

Proposes Move to Counter Jap Peace Offer to China

WOULD ADMIT 107 CHINESE TO U.S. YEARLY

Rep. Gosset Seeks Adoption of Bill To End Exclusion, Cites Nippon's Change.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —Predicting that "Japan may soon offer China generous peace terms to get out of the war," Rep. Gossett (D) Tex., today urged congressional approval this fall of his bill to repeal the Chinese exclusion act.

"The Japanese," the Texan said, "Have completely revised their propaganda program, have barred acts of atrocity against the Chinese, and are even passing out candy to the children when they invade a Chinese city.

"The Japs are constantly bombarding the Chinese with so-called 'friendship' broadcasts in which much is made of the fact that the United States has laws on its books denying the Chinese admission to this country. Since the state department renounced extraterritoriality more than a year ago, our exclusion act has been the main peg on which the Jap has hung his propaganda.

"I think that Japan is certain to offer China an easy peace to get out of the war in the near future and unless this country takes every possible precaution we may suffer a severe setback in the orient."

Gossett's bill, on which the house immigration committee has held exhaustive hearings, would repeal the Chinese exclusion act and fix the quota of admissible Chinese at 107 a year. In addition, it carries a "rider" which would reduce all other immigration quotas by 50 per cent, a total reduction of 25,000 immigrants a year.

High Chinese officials, it is understood, have assured officials of this government that repeal of the act would greatly bolster morale in their country and would do much to counteract Japanese propaganda. State department officials, while refusing to take a public stand on the matter, are also said to favor repeal.

HITLER'S PAPER URGES LOYALTY

Admits Germans Failed To Calculate Extent of Allied Air War.

3—FINAL ... ... MAL ...

BERN, Switzerland—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Boebachter, appealed today for loyalty on the home front as the attitude of the civilian population toward the heavy bombings of the Reich and the the military reverses in Russia and Sicily became a cardinal element in Axis plans for carrying on the war.

The, Beobachter's appeal, addressed to those from the evacuated zones and inserted into its news columns as a small box, said, "You who come from the air raid emergency areas have shown exemplary conduct. Be likewise true to your foster district with your confidence to help maintain the inner front."

The newspaper added in an editorial, "The attitude of the home front is the deciding one."

The first Nazi newspaper to do so, it flatly acknowledged that something had been left out of the Axis war plans. The Allied air war, it said, was not "calculated with" and "today is the special worry of the German leadership."

When he revived several hours later he was in the back of a truck in an isolated lot off North Main street and his money, a new pair of shoes, and his checkbook were missing, Mauk said.

He gave police a description of the two suspects and officers found a picture of one of them which had been lost in a tavern.

STUDY BIDS ON FOUR PROJECTS

Director and Engineer Receive Offers on Street Work, Radio, Well, Gravel.

Bids on four city projects amounting to more than $30,000 were being studied today by Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff and City Engineer W. C. Statler.

The proposals were opened at noon at the city building and Wolff said figures were being tabulated this afternoon to determine the low bids.

Largest of the projects is the resurfacing of East Fifth street between Main street and the Pennsylvania railroad near the Westinghouse plant. The work is expected to cost well over $20,000.

Bids also were received on the construction of an additional 20-inch well at the Maxwell Springs pumping station to supplement the city's war supply, new radio equipment for the city police department, and supplying crushed gravel for city construction jobs for the rest of the year.

OWI CUTS STAFF

WASHINGTON —(AP)— OWI's domestic division has slashed 777 employes from a 1,269-man staff to conform with congressional reduction of its operating budget to $2,250,000 from the $8,800,000 it asked for this biennium.

REVEALS EX-DUCE SAID ITALY COULD HAVE KEPT OUT OF WAR

(By Associated Press)

BERN, Switzerland — Benito Mussolini in his last interview with a correspondent of the Corriere del Ticino of Lugano June 6—six weeks before his downfall — admitted Italy could have remained out of the war.

Describing his visit to il duce in the spacious hall of the Palazzo Venezia, the correspondent said he found him lean but bearing his 60 years well "despite stomach ulcers from which he has been suffering." He said Mussolini appeared sad.

"Times are hard," Mussolini told the correspondent, who reported that he spoke of the difficulty of feeding the Italian people; the hardships under the bombs whose number and weight are a prodigality that is entirely American." The war, Mussolini said, would be long; many nations until now out of it— Sweden, Spain, and Turkey— would probably be forced to enter.

The German soldiers, Mussolini was quoted as saying, dominated the Russian; the Briton is a hard fighter, while the American, "the latest arrival in the field, might in a year or so become an excellent soldier."

Asked if Italy could have kept out of the conflict, Mussolini replied promptly, "Certainly," the correspondent said, and then added:

"She could have, as a small state, remained outside of the struggle. As a neutral, she probably would have had great financial and commercial advantages. But Italy judged the honor of a great nation did not coincide with only material profits. She had already proclaimed her vital rights and placed before the conscience of the world her problems of expansion. Raw materials, work and production. To have confined herself to a neutrality based on monetary gain would have been a definate renunication of a century-old goal. That was the reason we launched ourselves ardently into the battle."

DESCRIBES HOW SERVICE WIVES WILL GET AID

State Health Director Explains Operation of Maternity Plan For Ohio.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—State Health Director R. H. Markwith today outlined the procedure by which wives of Ohio service men will be able to participate in the federal maternity aid plan now before the federal children's bureau for approval.

Markwith said he expected federal approval of the Ohio plan "sometime late this week or early next week."

Ohio has requested $60,000 for the first month of operation of the plan. At a per capita cost of about $80 a case, including care of the child until it reaches one year, this would take care of about 700 maternity cases, Markwith said.

As soon as the money is deposited with the state treasury for use of the health department, Markwith said, application forms for participation in the program will be mailed to health department offices in 204 cities of 5,000 or more population.

Local health officials then will decide how the applications best can be made available to service wives. The Red Cross probably will cooperate in this phase of the program, Markwith said.

Markwith said the application forms will be divided into two parts, one to be filled out by the prospective mother and one by the physician of her choice. Each section includes only about 10 questions, he said.

The most important thing is for the applicant to prove that she is the wife of a serviceman. She will be required to supply his serial number.

After the wife has filled out her part of the application, Markwith said, she must take it to her physician who will verify that she is a service wife and will answer necessary medical questions, including whether the birth is to be at home or at a hospital.

The physician then will forward the application to the state health department which in turn will authorize him as the service wife's physician and notify the applicant, the hospital and the local health department of the fact.

Markwith said every effort had been made to make the program as simple as possible in order that a maximum number of service wives would be able to take advantage of the plan.

He also said that the Ohio plan "represents the best of any in the nation."

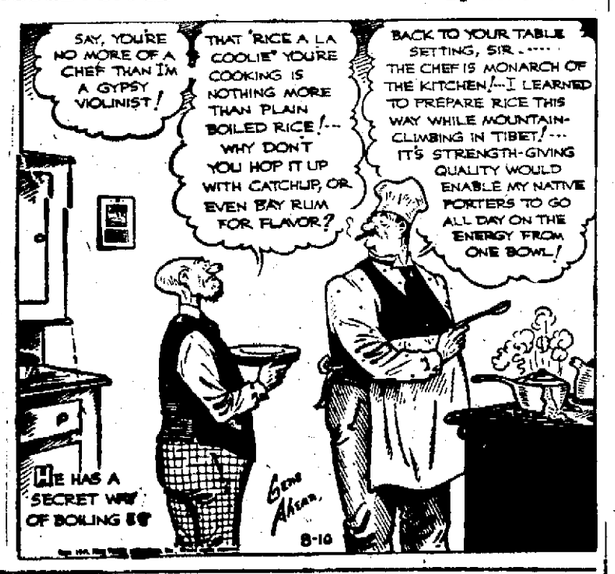
JUDGE PUFFLE— By Gene Ahern



SAY, YOU'RE NO MORE OF A CHEF THAN I'M A GYPSY VIOLINIST!
THAT 'RICE A LA COOLIE' YOU'RE COOKING IS NOTHING MORE THAN PLAIN BOILED RICE!— WHY DON'T YOU HOP IT UP WITH CATCHUP, OR EVEN BAY RUM FOR FLAVOR?
BACK TO YOUR TABLE SETTING, SIR.— THE CHEF IS MONARCH OF THE KITCHEN!— I LEARNED TO PREPARE RICE THIS WAY WHILE MOUNTAIN-CLIMBING IN TIBET!— IT'S STRENGTH-GIVING QUALITY WOULD ENABLE MY NATIVE PORTERS TO GO ALL DAY ON THE ENERGY FROM ONE BOWL!
HE HAS A SECRET WAY OF BOILING IT

Petroleum Production For Week Ended Aug. 7 Shows Increase.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Small and irregular price swings ruled in most leaders in today's early stock market dealings.

Fractionally higher at a quiet opening were Atlantic Coast Line, American Smelting, U. S. Rubber, Standard Oil (N.J.) and U. S. Steel. Among lower issues were American Telephone, Consolidated Edison and International Harvester.

Those interested in the oil shares noted the estimate of the Oil and Gas Journal that domestic production of crude petroleum in the week ended Aug. 7 totaled 4,208,025 barrels daily, an increase of 86,850 barrels daily over the preceding week.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Grain prices opened generally steady in quiet trading. Trades were apparently awaiting the government crop report which will be issued after trading closes today.

Wheat opened ¼ lower to ⅜ higher than yesterday's finish, September $1.43-1.43⅛, and subsequently ruled about steady. Rye was unchanged to ½ cent lower, September 99-98¾. Oats were unchanged.

LEAVES FROM NOTEBOOK OF WAR REPORTER

Proof Grows Italians Hate Nazis; Night Bombing Plays Odd Tricks.

By HAROLD V. BOYLE

WITH THE AEF IN SICILY—(AP)—Leaves from a war correspondent's notebook:

Signs of increasing dissatisfaction between German and Italian soldiers are multiplying.

The latest evidence—evidence of a kind that cannot be misinterpreted or doubted—was the discovery of seven wounded Italian soldiers in San Stefano when Americans entered the town after working their way through one of the most diabolic mine fields ever laid.

The Italians said they had been shot by their German comrades when they tried to give themselves up. Then the Nazis fled the town and entrenched themselves in a new line of hills closer to Messina, the coming Axis graveyard in Sicily.

Earlier in the campaign, the Italians complained, the Germans forced them into front lines ahead even of the Nazi minefields, where they were blown up when forced to retreat.

Captured Nazis have complained bitterly of sabotage by native civilians and asserted that Italians fire their last bullets at them before surrendering.

"We shot one German sniper hiding in a tree through the arm after killing his buddy," said Sergeant Michael Bozovich of Pittsburgh. "He told us they were making their last stand and were short of chow and water. He said they came here June 11 after two months in France where he said German soldiers now are afraid to go about at night because there is so much sabotage and the civilians hide and shoot them."

Night bombing, a device used often by the Germans to harrass front line troops who are pushing them back, plays some weird tricks. One bomb that fell among a scattered group of sleeping soldiers blew the bed of one right up into a tree. The explosion rolled him several feet. He was unhurt, but didn't sleep much the rest of that night.

Two bombs fell about 10 and 20 feet from the ground bunks of Private Daniel J. Sullivan of Braintree, Mass., and Private Norbert B. Wittrock, of Cincinnati. They escaped without a scratch. When daylight came they discovered that the bomb had hurled a one hundred pound rock into the air and dropped it within four inches of their heads. Asked where they would sleep the next night they said:

"We're staying right where we are. That looks like the luckiest spot in Sicily."

It was interesting to watch the reaction of the 45th Infantry division after it had gone into battle for the first time against the Germans. Before the attack they were a bit nervous—like a young boxer fighting an ex-champ who might still have one last haymaker in his system.

In one battle the boys from the Forty-fifth proved to their own and the high command's satisfaction that they could take the Germans on their own terms and roll them back on their heels. After that battle Allied commanders knew that their latest combat division ranked with their best. The boys themselves were a little awed by their own success.

"You know those Germans have been putting out so much of that superman propaganda for so long he had come to half believe it without knowing it," one soldier told me. "Hell, there's nothing super about those guys. They're good fighters, but a bullet goes through them just as easily as it does an Italian and they seem just as anxious to save their skins as the next man."

Yanks Look Over Wrecked German Tank

Two American soldiers examine the wreckage of a German tank that was smashed in the battle for Troina, captured by the U. S. Seventh army after a fierce engagement. The Yanks pushed on from the Sicilian city to effect a junction with the British Eighth army. U. S. army signal corps radiophoto.

THEATERS

She's Hep to Jive.

Betty Grable has taken on a job, that of jitterbug instructor to the girls at 20th Century-Fox studios. During filming of her current picture, "Coney Island," now at the Ohio in which she is starred with George Montgomery and Cesar Romero, Betty discovered that few of the girls could really "swing it." Knowing that the boys at the Hollywood canteen like to step out with a fast rug-cutting routine, Betty undertook the task of teaching the girls the latest steps. Incidently, she should know something about "jitterbugging" since she recently took the vows with Harry James, nation's top trumpet player.

War Film Opens.

"Assignment In Brittany," starring Pierre Aumont, the French actor, opens Wednesday at the Madison for a three-day engagement. The picture is the story of the adventure of the Commandos. Aumont plays a dual role as British spy and French soldier. His mission is to find a secret Nazi submarine base in Britanny. Susan Peters and Signe Hasso have leading parts in the film, based on the novel by Helen MacInnes. Co-attraction brings Bill Boyd as Hopalong Cassidy to the screen in "Border Patrol."

Under Secret Orders.

"Under Secret Orders," which opens today at the Ritz, relates the story of one of the first World war's most glamorous spies, Anne Marie Lesser, better known as Mademoiselle Docteur. Anne Marie was in love with a Lieut. Hans Hoffman of the German Secret Service. When he was sent to Paris, he met death at the hands of a French spy. Entrusted with his secret documents, Anne Marie delivered them to Hoffman's superior who was impressed with the girl's cunning and offered to put her on his staff of operatives. Thus began the career of the "master spy." Dita Parlo plays the part of the spy. Co-attraction is "You Can't Get Away With Murder."

Gestapo. F. B. I. Clash.

A timely story of wartime America, with counterfeiting as the basis of a situation which finally attracts attention of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is "I Escaped From the Gestapo," now at the Park. Dean Jagger, John Carradine and Mary Brian play the leading roles in this Monogram picture. A counterfeiting gang of saboteurs builds the plot of the film and excitement reaches its peak when one of the gang turns against them. The F. B. I. steps in and the story reaches a climax when the two forces clash. Co-attraction is "Reveille With Beverly."

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

LONDON—(By Wireless)—A most revealing index of the sinking state of Berlin's prospects is the action of Stockholm in stopping the German troop traffic through Sweden to and from Norway. Sweden, the weathervane of the north, thus swings around to a point more sharply in our direction. Perhaps this is a sequel to Sicily and Italy, and especially to the Russian offensive.

Clapper

Last spring in Sweden I heard much criticism of the government's policy of permitting German troops to travel over Swedish railroads. Public criticism reached a point where the government had to explain in a secret session of the Riksdag, with Prime Minister Per Albin Hansson promising to end the traffic at the first opportunity.

Arguments over Sweden's technical right under international law to allow German troops to cross her territory can be brushed aside. The realistic facts are that Sweden yielded to German pressure in the summer of 1940 when Hitler was riding high. Norway had capitulated. The Allies had abandoned Narvik. Sweden was surrounded by the Axis.

Germany wanted to save shipping by using Swedish railroads to take troops in and out—ostensibly troops on home leave, unarmed—though actually the privilege was used as a means of replacing German troops in Norway. Arms and war material were carried on separate trains. Normally about 2000 German troops moved every day, half of them each way, which meant saving several transport ships each week over the longer and dangerous run up the coast of Norway.

The Swedish government, finding that there was no technical violation of neutrality in permitting this arrangement, yielded to German pressure reluctantly and under embarrassment, as Hansson said, accepting it as one of the burdens of the situation. The Norwegians were bitterly critical of that concession. The continuation of the troop traffic was one of the chief causes of a deep alienation of the two Scandinavian countries. The traffic has also been one of the contentious points in the economic relations between the Allies and Sweden.

Immediately after the Stockholm decision to abandon the traffic was announced, the Norwegian government, through Minister of Foreign Affairs Trygve Lie here, issued a statement mellowing the Norwegian attitude toward Sweden and praising the favorable turn now occurring in relations with Sweden. He said the chief obstacles in the path of sincere co-operation between the two countries had been cleared.

What is happening is that a pro-Allied ring is forming more tightly around Germany. Sweden's action is a plain notice of defiance to Germany, notice that Sweden is laying her chips on our side. Sweden's wish to do that was clearly evident to any visitor in Sweden last spring, even high government officials saying privately that only the fear of Nazi retaliation held Sweden from renouncing the troop traffic then.

Obviously the Swedish government—which has throughout the war followed a most cautious and timid policy—now feels perfectly safe in making this move to clear her self-respect and satisfy Allied wishes at the expense of Berlin.

The threats which Von Ribbentrop has been notoriously making to the Swedish minister in Berlin no longer have effect. The oily work of Hans Thomsen, German minister to Stockholm, has failed completely. His job was to hold Sweden in line, and this is spectacular defeat for his mission in the north.

Finland is now the only Nazi toehold in the north—and one that Russia can snip off whenever she wishes to divert her efforts in that direction. Thus in the north the Nazi sun has set.

In the south we are seeing the last stages of resistance in Sicily, a prelude to a move that will make Italy a platform for one end of the most spectacular bombing offensive ever seen, which the air people believe will bring Germany to her knees.

The walls of Hitler's fortress are cracking all around now.

CHARGED WITH KIDNAPING OF 2-DAY-OLD BABY

Woman Says Child's Hers But Police Find Hospital Tag of Missing Gurney Child.

(By International News Service)

ALBANY, Ore. — Charged with stealing two-day-old Judith Gurney from Albany General hospital last Tuesday, Mrs. Catherine Erline Wright was in the custody of Sheriff Herbert Shelton today.

A search of Mrs. Wright's home revealed the identification tag issued to Judith Gurney at the Albany hospital. Footprints of the child taken from Mrs. Wright checked with those of the Gurney baby registered at the hospital.

The district attorney also filed an affidavit to hold the woman's husband, Sgt. Jess Wright, as a material witness.

Mrs. Wright, who refused to disclose why she had stolen the child, was arrested last night after state and city police, checking on a neighbor's tip, called at her home. She refused to answer their knock although officers stated that she was in the house.

Watching nearby, officers saw her leave the house soon after with the child in her arms. She placed the baby in her car and returned to the house for a large suitcase. Officers met her at the car and asked about the child.

Mrs. Wright maintained that she had given birth to the child last Monday, a week. She gave the name of her doctor as Dr. E. G. Fortmiller and agreed to an examination by him. With Dr. M. M. Woodworth, Dr. Fortmiller told police that the woman could not possibly have borne a child for five or six years.

State policeman Don Christenson who went to Mrs. Wright's home to question her recalled visiting her 20 days previously with an FBI agent to check a report that the woman had married Sgt. Wright without divorcing her previous husband.

Stanley Newtson and Mrs. C. M. Wheeler, neighbors of Mrs. Wright called police after seeing baby clothes in the woman's yard, although she had no children. Mrs. Robert Wheeler, another neighbor, told police that she called on Mrs. Wright last Tuesday, the day the Gurney baby's disappearance was discovered. Mrs. Wheeler stated that Mrs. Wright had shown her the baby then and claimed it as her own.

Mrs. W. B. Gurney, the baby's mother, whose condition has been very serious since the child's abduction, said when told of Judith's recovery:

"I always knew that the baby would be returned to me."

AFL LEADERS WEIGH LEWIS' APPEAL TODAY

Meet In Chicago To Consider Reunion With Man Who Bolted In 1935.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO—Thirteen labor leaders shed their coats today and began threshing out one of the American Federation of Labor's most ticklish problems—whether to take John L. Lewis and his miners back into the fold.

The 13 men comprised the AFL executive council, charged with the responsibility of approving or rejecting Lewis' petition for reaffiliation of his United Mine Workers. The miners split the AFL asunder in 1935 when they withdrew to form the nucleus of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Last October Lewis led the miners in a bolt from the CIO, and since then, during one of the stormiest periods of its long history, the UMW has remained independent. But a few weeks ago Lewis knocked at the door for readmittance to the AFL.

The council members, headed by AFL President William Green, diplomatically declined to comment as they prepared to consider the miners' request by listening to the report of a three-man AFL committee which met with Lewis July 20 to discuss reaffiliation. The committee was headed by Daniel J. Tobin, president of the powerful AFL teamsters union, who said he would support the petition.

The council contemplated these favorable factors in considering the miners' application:

The UMW would increase the AFL's ranks by about 600,000 members, and would give it a distinct edge in its fight for labor leadership against the CIO.

The AFL would collect a per capita tax of 1½ cents per month from every one of the UMW's first 300,000 members, and one cent per month from every one of the second 300,000.

But these factors acted against acceptance of the miners: The objections of the rival progressive mine workers, already affiliated with the AFL.

One of the most difficult issues was the status of Lewis' District 50, an organization within the UMW representing workers in many industries. District 50's membership parallels that of many AFL craft unions. Lewis, it was learned, demands that settlement of any jurisdictional claims concerning District 50 be negotiated after acceptance of the UMW.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—Last winter a newspaper published a story in which some marines whose names were not given, told of the refusal of the civilian crew of a merchant vessel to handle cargo at a hot spot in the Pacific. I have no conviction whether the story was true or incorrect but I am convinced that it was not a cold-blooded fake because similar incidents have occurred at sea on union vessels, especially on ships manned by the communist union. However, the communists promptly raised the devil and talked big about the fair name of their organization and Frank Knox, not wanting to admit that such rotten conditions exist, although his intelligence officers have reported at length and in detail on them, has thrown a screen of secrecy over the information.

Pegler

Officers and blue-jackets of the navy who serve the guns on merchant ships don't dare speak for publication and the logs, containing explicit information, have been impounded for the duration on the ground that they might reveal to the enemy information with which he could deduce the current or future position of certain vessels.

Meantime, the navy, the coast guard and the army have been getting tough with drunks, shipjumpers and insubordinates and Knox apparently desires to clean up the situation and hush up the story until the war is over. Knox, of course, has no sympthy for communists but it is no credit to him that such things could and did happen, including continual harassment of blue-jackets and young officers whose duties were tough enough without any gratuitous trouble from their civilian shipmates, and it is a fact that the administration has favored the communist unioneers of the sea consistently for years.

As an example of the kind of thing that Knox is suppressing I cite herewith from a report of a voyage by the S. S. Nameless.

At a port in Africa, the captain went ashore and got confidential orders to sail early the next morning. He immediately returned to his ship and cancelled all liberty but was unable to tell his crew the reason. In the first place, he could have been sent to prison for revealing secret information and, moreover, some drunk in the company would have blabbed it all over the waterfront and some might have jumped ship.

But one of his AB's demanded an explanation and mustered the crew to urge them to demand one.

After the vessel shoved off the ensign in command of the navy gun detail noticed that several of the civilian sailors were not careful to black out at night and cautioned two AB's, who were tireless troublemakers all the way, that light was showing from their portholes at night. These two, who mocked and ridiculed the navy gunners when they were preparing to fire on a suspicious vessel, gave the ensign nothing but back talk so, as a precaution, the master ordered that thereafter the main switch controlling the lights in their section of the ship was to be pulled every evening.

The water cooler in the crew's mess went on the blink and two of the three chief hecklers in the crew beefed loudly, although plenty of ice water was provided from milk cans chilled in the refrigerator. There were no repair parts on board so the squawking went on and on and the two mischief makers criticized the navy sailors for letting the ship's officers have some of their ice-water. They said the officers ought to be made to drink warm water at their meals until the ship reached some place where repair parts could be found.

One morning an officer reported to the captain that one of the hell-raisers, standing two hour tricks at the wheel, had steered five degrees off course for 20 minutes on one trick and for 15 minutes on another. The sailor said he must have dozed off, although he had not been working any extra hours.

The next day one of the trio tried to give orders to one of the officers, claiming that he was speaking as a delegate for the rest of the men. An investigation was made and the men denied that they had authorized him to do this in their name.

Well things went along like that until they were almost home when one of the hecklers got into a fight with another sailor and they went ashore to settle it whereupon another of the trouble makers followed along to help his comrade. The crew then petitioned the skipper not to let the two bad actors return, saying they would not guarantee that these men would live to see their home port. That night several members of the crew were beaten up ashore by these two so the captain paid off the pair and left them behind.

The report added that one of the trio was an ex-convict on parole.

WMC TO MOVE TO COLUMBUS

State Office To Be Shifted, Director Named; Bricker's Protest Criticized.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—The war manpower commission today planned to move the state offices from Cleveland to Columbus, as Regional Director Robert C. Goodwin expressed regret that Gov. John W. Bricker had criticized the location of the office before consulting him.

Returning from Washington, Goodwin announced that the decision to move the state offices to Columbus had been made before Gov. Bricker issued a statement objecting to the location of the offices in Cleveland.

A director for the state unit has not yet been named, but it was believed that the two most probable candidates were Edward L. Keenan, deputy regional director and Wade Hammond, Ohio manager of the U. S. Employment service.

Decentralization of authority is the basic reason for shifting the location of the offices, Goodwin said.

"Under the new setup we will decentralize to the greatest extent possible the regional control over the area organizations of the war manpower commission in the state of Ohio.

Goodwin also said that changing of the location would put officials in better contact with other government agencies.

SEEK WAY OUT OF MINE TANGLE

Inspectors Consider Claims of Striking Men That Work's Unsafe.

(By Central Press)

BELLAIRE—Federal and state bureau of mines inspectors met with United Mine Worker officials today in an effort to seek solution of a walkout of 600 miners at the Willow Grove mine in protest to mining practices which the miners said might cause a disaster similar to an explosion in 1940 which claimed 72 victims.

Adolph Pacifico, vice president of District 6, said the men objected to the methods used in employing "permissible powder" in blasting operations without tests for gas.

The powder is being used experimentally at two places in the mine, Pacifico said, without tests for gas before and after each "shot."

"Under present circumstances," Pacifico said, "I cannot recommend that the miners return to work. In my opinion it is a dangerous propostition."

A spokesman for the Hanna Coal Co., operators of the mine, said such inspections are not required by law because the operation "is a not gaseous mine."

The Office of the Ohio Division of Mines said that "inspections are not required" in nongaseous mines, but added that it was "inquiring into the Willow Grove case.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: Helen Hamilton is the owner of the Troika in Washington, a nocturnal playground of the nation's lawmakers, lobbyists, diplomats, army and navy big shots. She has perhaps seen more of these celebrities with their coiffures down than any single observer in Washington. —D. K.)

Helen Hamilton Says:

A NEWSPAPERMAN once wrote that if you stood in the lobby of the Raffles hotel in Singapore long enough, you'd meet everyone you ever knew. The other evening, a senator from a western state, who has been in Washington for so many years that many suspect he had a hand in drafting the Bill of Rights, said to me: "Helen, if I stood at the door of your place long enough, I'm sure I'd run into every national and international figure currently concerned with the United States."

As flattered as I was by his observation, it's not quite accurate. I haven't entertained the president or Mrs. Roosevelt, although all of the Roosevelt progeny have made the Troika one of their stopping places in Washington many times.

And as much as I would like to have the president and the first lady, my secret ambition is to serve dinner to New York's volcanic mayor, Mr. LaGuardia.

A neighbor of mine when he is in Washington, Mayor LaGuardia is not a night club goer and when he dines, it is invariably at a public function or in his hotel apartment.

We have presented nearly all of the leading night club entertainers. Yet, I recall an evening not so long ago when a dinner guest, without uttering a single word, took the play away from our star.

It was Sophie Tucker's opening night. The club was jammed with notables. Senators and congressmen were sprinkled around the room and there was a goodly number of representatives from the diplomatic corps. Five minutes before Sophie was scheduled to make her entrance, Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean entered the room with a party of ten persons which included her son-in-law, Senator Bob Reynolds of North Carolina. On her right arm, Mrs. McLean wore so many diamond bracelets, they came up to her elbow, and hanging from a thin gold meshed chain, around her neck, was the fabulous Hope diamond.

The entire assemblage gasped at this display of Kimberly knick-knacks and when the orchestra struck up Miss Tucker's introductory music and she walked out to the center of the floor, not an eye in the room was on her. They were all riveted at Mrs. McLean. It wasn't until after her first number that Sophie recaptured her audience.

A regular patron of whom I am fond is J. Edgar Hoover, the very personable and able director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. One evening, when I entered the club, headwaiter Mischa informed me that Mr. Hoover had made a particularly fine speech on the radio earlier that evening.

Later that night, J. Edgar entered the room. I went to his table and complimented him on his very fine speech. He thanked me, and not until later that evening did I learn that the "Mr. Hoover" who made the radio talk was our former president! My face is still red.

port, and communications through southern Italy. Six small enemy vessels were sunk along the Sicilian coast by fighter-bombers.

The new Axis line was believed to anchor on Ca.o D'Orlando in the north and follow the 23-mile-long road southeastward to Randazzo on the northwestern slope of Mt. Etna.

From Randazzo eastward the Axis holds a 15-mile stretch of road that joins the coastal route near Fumefreddo, about 13 miles north of Acireale. Thus capture of Randazzo in the center would wedge the routes linking the Messina triangle.

The bombardments on the east took place Saturday and Sunday nights near Taormina, north of Fumefreddo, and at Riposto and Acireale before that point was taken. It was disclosed that heavy U. S. warships supported the northern coast landing with a bombardment of enemy positions.

Heavy Allied bombers plastered the Messina road junctions yesterday while other Allied planes continued the sweeps and patrols designed to prevent an Axis escape. Three enemy planes were destroyed while three Allied planes were missing.

Planes Range Sicily Almost Unopposed

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA — (AP) — Hundreds of Allied aircraft engaged in bombing and strafing sweeps over Sicily, Sardinia, Messina strait and the toe of Italy saw exactly 15 enemy planes yesterday.

"Nowhere did our aircraft encounter opposition worth noting," said an Allied air force statement.

"Strategic bombers saw none and their American Lightning escorts counted only 10. American Warhawks sweeping Sardinia encountered no enemy fighters. Tactical bombers and fighters (over Sicily) saw only five throughout yesterday."

In one of the few dogfights of the day, Lt. Otto A. Stoucal of Ellsworth, Kas., a Lightning pilot, shot down a Messerschmitt-109 while escorting Marauders on a bridge-bombing mission at Angitola in southern Italy.

Flying Fortresses tangled up the crossroads in the Messina area, RAF and Canadian Wellingtons went after landing craft on the Messina beaches and caused fires at Paradiso, and other raiders sank six small ships off Milazzo on Sicily's north coast.

Sicily Propaganda 'Failed to Take'

By SGT. JACK FOISIE

(Stars and Stripes Correspondent)
(Distributed By The Associated Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN NORTHERN SICILY—Mussolini gave the Sicilians a full dose of propaganda, but it didn't take.

The people of this island have been saturated with Rome-made movies depicting Americans as rapists, cowards, ogres, wastrels and millionaires with stolen Italian wealth.

Pvt. Gino Tagilieri of Paterson, N. J., has been conducting a one-man poll of Sicilian opinion, and he says that while the natives were entertained by Il Duce's propaganda reels they did not really believe them. "They got too many nice letters from uncles, aunts, cousins and nephews in the States to swallow all that tosh," he added.

You don't need a travel book or three years of Caesar's commentaries to sense that Sicily is rooted in history.

"It does something to a guy to know he is fighting in the same league with the old Greeks, Romans and vandals," remarked Sgt. Donald Brunni of Van Wert, Ohio.

There are plenty of men of fighting age in the streets and it is suspected that many are fresh out of uniform. Nobody seems to care, for as one realistic Yank said:

"It saves us the trouble and expense of transporting and feeding them."

Demand That Rome Be Bombed Again

LONDON—(AP)—A demand that Rome be bombed again was sounded in the London press today as the Sicilian campaign moved rapidly toward a climax with Premier Pietro Badoglio's government showing no sign of heeding Allied surrender demands.

Urging a repetition of the July 19 bombing of Rome, the London Daily Express declared "we should remind a million Italians in their capital that their need to force a decision from Badoglio is still more pressing than ours."

MEET TO O.K. MERGER TERMS

Western Union, Postal Stockholders, Set To Ratify Big Combine.

NEW YORK—(AP)— Stockholders of Western Union and Postal Telegraph meet today to ratify terms of a merger and thus end the fight for the nation's telegraph business which for nearly a century has extended into every city and hamlet.

The huge financial transaction leaves the 92-year-old Western Union company alone—outside of the mails—in the field of domestic written communications.

Western Union will acquire all assets of Postal and assume liabilities and obligations of Postal, including the amount owed by Postal to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

CHURCHILL, FDR MEETING SEEN

Diplomats Expect Leaders To Confer on Momentous New Developments.

if the German leader has been deposed, too much importance should not be attached to the move.

He told reporters that his conference with Mr. Roosevelt had dealt mainly with a review of the Italian situation arising out of the recent change in government and the continuing Allied pressure which has brought all Italy to a state of near-panic.

Information chiefs attending the White House conference included Presidential Press Secretary Stephen T. Early; OWI Director Elmer Davis; his assistant Milton Eisenhower; Army Chief of Public Relations Maj. Gen. Alexander Surles; and Censorship Director Byron Price.

Reports and rumors of a Roosevelt-Churchill meeting have emanated from London, Washington, and other Allied neutral capitals, and the official German news agency has carried dispatches that the British prime minister actually was enroute to such a meeting.

From Madrid have come reports that Hitler has been deposed and a military-political triumvirate has been named to rule Germany. The triumvirate, according to these dispatches, consists of Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Hitler's chief aide, Field Marshal Wilhelm Kietel, chief of the German high command, and Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, commander in chief of the navy.

There have also been reports that Berlin and other large German cities are being swept by a wave of strikes and civilian disturbances.

Should diplomatic and underground channels carry verifications of these reports, they certainly would come within the purview of any Roosevelt-Churchill conference, and on these facts, the two leaders would very probably map the military and political strategy designed to further agitate German unrest and knock the third reich out of the war.

The removal of Benito Mussolini and appointment of a new government under the leadership of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, is given by observers as being another reason for a possible strategy conference. Italian unrest, strikes, and numerous peace demonstrations have been reported almost daily from nations surrounding the bomb-torn, war-weary Italy, and it is viewed as likely that Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill would want to receive personally the expected "unconditional surrender" capitulation of the Italian leaders.

This Confab Seems To Have Gained Goal

Informal conference, above, of Allied military chiefs on an airfield somewhere in Sicily seems to have achieved its goal because now the Allied forces are cleaning up the remnants of the Axis defenders. Left to right are Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the British Eighth Army; General Bedell-Smit; Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., commander of the U. S. Seventh Army, and Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander of Allied ground forces in Sicily.

posed and forced Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch to rule on several occasions:

"Objection overruled. The witness has already answered."

Dr. Reed admitted that he had discussed Weekley's health with some Butler residents, but denied making any malicious or slanderous statements.

Since Dr. Reed was called to the stand by the plaintiff's attorneys, his own attorneys were unable to cross-examine him, under existing law.

Mrs. Mildred Morgan, Butler resident, who followed Dr. Reed on the stand testified that when the physician came to her home Oct. 7, 1941 to treat her son, he said, "You want to be sure to vote right. We want to get this man out of here. He has syphilis. You don't know when one of your children may pick up the germs."

The next witness, Hallie Pearl Taylor testified that on or about Oct. 1941 at the grocery where she was working Dr. Reed said, "That man has syphillis. Maybe you don't know or don't care. I'll give you five dollars if you can get him to go and have a blood test." She said the physician was referring to Weekley when he made these statements.

In Richard Stone's testimony it was revealed that Dr. Reed said to him on or about Nov. 4, 1941, "We have to have a new school board, Roberts, Morgan and Gower. We've got to get rid of this man." The witness said that when he asked what man, Dr. Reed answered, "Weekley. He has the syphillis."

Testimony of most of the other witnesses for the plaintiff ran along the same general line.

Mrs. Lucille Weekley, wife of the plaintiff, took the stand briefly, only identifying herself and her relationship to the plaintiff. Defense attorneys did not cross-examine her.

Percy Crumpleton, a former member of the Butler board of education, testified that on October 6, 1941 he went with Weekley to Mt. Vernon where the latter had a blood test made at Mercy hospital. He said the result was negative and he presented this evidence to the school board at its monthly meeting.

Other witnesses called this morning were Fern Hunter, Hattie Forbes, Effie Crumpleton, DeWitt Wright, Florence Remy, and Lester Ball. They were called to corroborate the testimony of previous witnesses and to attempt to establish malice on the part of the doctor.

The jury completed at 2 p. m. yesterday after more than three hours of selecting and discarding, includes C. M. Crafton, 114 Park avenue west; Hazel Zellner, 101 Rowland avenue; Flora Goodman, 180 West Fourth street; E. A. Clingan, 208 Vennum avenue; J. D. Irvin Meyers, driver for the Yellow Stripe cab company, was arrested on Park avenue west by police who said he was driving 47 miles an hour. His hearing was set for Aug. 18 in municipal court.

Taken into court this morning, Delbert Lee Poston, 151 North Walnut street, was fined $5 and costs after pleading guilty to operating his motorcycle with a temporary permit and unaccompanied by a licensed driver, and Harold Feick, Galion, R. D. 1, who was fined $5 for failure to observe a stop sign on a road crossing U. S. Route 30-S Feick was arrested by the state highway patrol.

Traffic Commissioner Boals said there was no campaign in the city against speeders, but he wanted motorists to observe the traffic regulations and to keep their speed down to a war-time rate.

It has decided that there is no danger of such buttons, which are worn by workmen in the soup plants, falling into the soup. The company had requested that the wearing of buttons be discontinued for fear of "contamination."

The decision was part of an order directing the Campbell Soup company to include a maintenance of union membership clause in their contract with 7,800 members of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America (CIO) at the Chicago and Camden, N. J., plants.

The union also was granted the checkoff of dues from paychecks Industry members dissented on maintenance of membership and the checkoff.

ITALY AGREES TO FIGHT ON, SAYS REPORT

London Hears Germany Sends 500,000 Men Over Alps, Panzers Into Greece.

sive if new developments more favorable to Italy should arise.

It was understood, a frontier dispatch said, that Badoglio considered himself forced to continue at the side of Germany because acceptance of the Allied demand for unconditional surrender would jeopardize "the honor of both Italy and the house of Savoy."

While Badoglio is anxious to find a way out of the war for Italy, the dispatch said, he will continue fighting "until a more intelligent appreciation of the Italian situation dispels preconceived ideas on military and diplomatic development which are inconsistent with the destiny of the Italian people."

Travelers arriving in Spain from Rome, indicating one possible reason for Badoglio's decision, said Germany had sent 32 divisions into Italy since Premier Benito Mussolini's removal. Earlier reports had told of the Germans digging in along the river Po in northern Italy.

Elsewhere in Italy, only two minor disturbances were reported —a lumberyard strike at Varese and a peace demonstration at Genoa — and Axis-inspired advices received in Madrid asserted that the Italian people were accepting their government's contention that the Allies are attempting to terrorize rather than liberate them.

Despite the Allies' announcement that they are fighting only to overthrow Italian Fascism, the Badoglio government's propaganda machine was telling the Italian people, they are battling on Italian soil and only Saturday night heavily raided Milan, Turin and Genoa from the air.

Another report reaching Madrid was that the Badoglio government would make peace immediately if the Allies would guarantee Italy's pre-war frontiers. The government was said to fear that such cities as Fiume and Trieste would be given to Jugoslavia after the war.

Madrid heard that the German general staff believed the Allies would strike next in force at Greece, presumably with the British ninth and 10th armies now in the Middle East. American troops also have been reported by Axis sources to be stationed at Middle Eastern bases, but this never has been confirmed.

The Daily Telegraph dispatch discussing conditions inside Germany said the spirit of unrest was growing among German officers and men. Officers were said to be suffering from a "shot in the back psychosis" reminiscent of 1918.

The dispatch asserted that the Germans greatly feared an uprising among the vast forces of slave labor employed in German factories with one rumor prevalent that the Allies have dropped ammunition and supplies by parachute to this "foreign legion."

Rhine Twin Cities Blasted By RAF

LONDON—(U.P.)—Big formations of the RAF's heavy bombers blasted Mannheim and Ludwigshaven last night while speedy Mosquitos attacked targets in the industrial Ruhr valley, the air ministry announced today.

Nine bombers were lost during the night's operations, in the course of which RAF fighters attacked enemy airfields and railways in France and the Low Countries, shooting down two enemy aircraft, a communique said.

Large fires were reported set in Mannheim and Ludwigshaven, twin towns situated on opposite banks of the Rhine near its junction with the Neckar, 43 miles southwest of Frankfort.

Together the two towns form an important armament center. Great factories there turn out tanks, motor vehicles, Diesel engines and high explosives. The towns, which have a combined population of 350,000 in normal times, represent the second largest inland port in Europe.

Last night's attack was the 57th raid on the Mannheim-Ludwigshaven area, which was last hit on April 16.

It was the first time the RAF's heavy bombers had been over Germany since the night of Aug. 2, when they made their last smashing attack on Hamburg. The RAF's heavy bombers were over Milan, Turin and Genoa in northern Italy last Saturday night.

Preceding the night raids British fighters carried out patrols over northern France last evening, shooting down seven enemy aircraft in dogfights. Three of the British planes failed to return from these sweeps.

Britain, meanwhile, enjoyed another raid free night.

Heavy rain on New Georgia hampered ground forces advancing northward from Munda toward Bairoko.

Ground activity in the Salamaua sector was limited to patrolling and harassing artillery fire, the communique said.

HERE'S a familiar family scene in a typical American home. There's ample food because our standard of living affords it; there's an inviting variety because America produces it; there's a healthful balance because we in America are educated to the value of good nutrition.

Yet, something else is needed to bring together, from different sections of the country, meat and flour, coffee and sugar, and orange juice. Your railroad is needed. And when Betty pipes up in her shrill voice, "Some more orange juice, please", she's calling indirectly on the railroad that runs through her town.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1943.

A prejudice sometimes masquerades as "an honest conviction."

A great boom in the night club business is being noted on Broadway—only slightly retarded, it may be assumed, by gasoline rationing.

A government report says the per capita circulation of money is now $128.37—these being 59-cent dollars, of course, and subject to inflationary prices—which puts it back to about the old $31.48 figure.

Germany Isn't Ready for Peace

WHATEVER shift of authority may be going on in Germany, even to the extent of ditching Hitler, belief that changes might lead to quick ending of hostilities can come only from "wishful thinking" rather than realistic acceptance of existing conditions.

Time and again the rumor has been spread that Germany is on the verge of making "peace feelers," but any peace overtures that could be expected now, or in the near future, would naturally be based on acceptance of Germany's "rights" to occupied territory, and acceptance of such terms by the Allies is unthinkable.

As Russia continues to crowd from the east; as Italy becomes more of a liability than an asset; as the Balkan states become unmanageable; as Sweden loses fear of reprisals, and as Allied air attacks on German military objectives mount in intensity, the conclusion must eventually be reached by Nazi leaders that their war moves must hereafter be defensive, instead of offensive, and that their problem will be to save as much as possible out of the wreckage.

When Nazi troops have been withdrawn from France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Greece, and all other European areas gained by actual or threatened aggression—then will be a reasonable time for a "peace feeler" which will be tantamount to the unconditional surrender demanded by the United Nations.

Any "feeler" sent out in advance of withdrawal from forcibly seized territory must be regarded as premature and unworthy of serious consideration.

'Limited Resources' Against Japan

WHILE some pleasant news has been coming in about American successes in the war against Japan it should be kept in mind that accomplishments in the Southwest Pacific have thus far been minor, as compared with what must yet be done, and that it is only GAINING strength, rather than ADEQUATE strength, that is now being shown.

This was made clear by General MacArthur in his comment on the conquest of Munda.

"Our resources are still very limited," he said, "but results of our modest but continuous successes in campaigns have been cumulative to the point of being vital."

There is a feeling of confidence, of course, on the part of General MacArthur and his associates, that Allied victory against Japan is assured—but this confidence is based largely on RESOURCES THAT ARE EXPECTED, not those that have already arrived.

There was confidence in America, it will be recalled, that Pearl Harbor was impregnable, that help would arrive in time to save Bataan and Corregidor, that defeating Japan would be a mere "two weeks job"—and the like.

Resources in manpower and military equipment sufficient to win the war against Japan are still far from adequate—and it will not be until these resources are materially increased, and a way found to bolster Chinese participation in the war, that there will be any justification for confidence that Japanese fighting forces can be exterminated to the extent of ending resistance.

That Unexplained 'Invasion Currency'

NO EXPLANATION has yet been given from Washington as to the security back of that new "invasion currency" being used in Sicily, which, according to announcement of the treasury, is being used to pay Allied troops, thus becoming a medium of exchange on the island.

While this currency is of American origin the impression is given that it is not considered a treasury obligation but merely a convenience.

One of the powers of congress, as stated in the Constitution, is "to coin money and regulate the value thereof"—which may also be assumed to include printing money and regulating the value thereof.

If congress has authorized issuance of this new invasion currency it will be interesting to learn the value thereof—and how this value is attained.

Calling for More Doctors

THE JOURNAL of the American Medical Association says there are 6,000 more doctors needed by the American armed forces this year. It calls upon more physicians to volunteer, and suggests that if not enough of them appear, they may have to be drafted or obtained through special legislation.

So a serious problem arises. There is already a shortage of doctors in the civilian field. Almost anybody who has been in contact recently with sick people and hospitals knows how hard it is to get physicians in private life for individual and family service. The armies must have doctors, but so must people at home.

This is a situation that cannot be handled arbitrarily. It would be tragic if so many doctors were withdrawn from normal service that civilian illness increased alarmingly and epidemics were threatened. Military and civilian authorities both should be reasonable about this and consider all phases of the problem.

'Playful' Motorist Fined

OMISSION of the culprit's age seems an oversight in yesterday's mention of the arrest of an Ashland motorist for "playfully shining a spotlight on passing automobiles."

Mentality that would inspire such "playfulness" would indicate extreme youth, yet it must be assumed that the offender had reached an age to have lawfully acquired a driver's license.

It may sometimes be wondered whether assessing a fine in such cases is sufficient, or whether it might not be better to suspend driving privileges pending a mental test.

One observer likens the Italian situation to "changing barrels while going over Niagara Falls."

THEY'RE BEGINNING TO DOUBT HIM

Prussian War Lords Emerging As Real Power In Nazi Germany

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

RAPID decline of Axis fortunes presages a military regime in the reich. This column long ago pointed out that the Prussian war lords were most likely to take matters out of Hitler's hands when the Axis finally was crowded into a corner by the Allies.

We shouldn't overlook that German gangsterism springs from the generations-old Prussianism—one of the greatest evils the world has known. That's the putrid matter from which the morbid growth of Nazism, or Hitlerism, has drawn its nourishment, and from which many other criminal schemes against civilization have sprung.

The Prussian military machine—always plotting for conquests of aggression—has supported Hitler because it saw in him a powerful leadership. It has fostered his ego, and pushed him forward as a world-beater. So long as he kept his grip and was going places, Prussianism was willing to let him break trail, but it always has been a foregone conclusion that the fuehrer would mean little to the militarists once he had ceased to be useful.

REPORTS have it that the Prussian generals are planning a long war of defense. It's said that Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Hitler's second in command, has been vested with great powers and is to act as liaison between the generals and the fuehrer, who is to be allowed to carry on nominally with his Nazi party so as to prevent the political chaos which Mussolini's collapse has caused in Italy.

While we must treat this unconfirmed report gingerly, it makes sense. We are fighting this war to exterminate Hitlerism, and other forms of gansterism, and that certainly means Prussian militarism. Therefore we must expect this most powerful of all militaristic organizations to make a last-ditch stand, for it knows it won't get another chance as it did after the last war when the Allies got soft-hearted and failed to exact punishment for war guilt.

So far as Goering is concerned, next to Hitler he has been the outstanding personality in Germany. He has had—or at least did have—a great popular following. The rank and file of German people have had a real liking for "Hermann" as they always called him.

I saw a good deal of Goering back at the time of the Munich conference, and he was a popular figure. I saw an example of this in the sports palace in Berlin where a huge crowd gave him a tremendous ovation when he appeared on the platform before Hitler arrived to make a speech.

The fat Hermann, with the big, boyish grin, was called back to take a bow at least a dozen times by the wildly cheering audience, while he made an elegant display of his ornate uniform and multi-colored decorations.

So the crowd laughed and joked in friendly fashion with "Hermann," but when Hitler arrived—and this is vastly important—all levity vahished and the crowd tendered the fuehrer an ovation of reverence. Nobody ever thought of calling him "Adolf" or of trying to joke with him.

In that fact has lain Hitler's great strength. He has been not only a political and military chief, but to millions of his followers he has been a spiritual leader. Many Germans, especially among the young people, literally regard him as a messiah, and the idea of divinity has been carefully cultivated by his lieutenants.

I believe that no man can take Hitler's place, and that once his dictatorship collapses, the whole structure of Nazism will go to pieces rapidly. Goering perhaps could do better than anyone else in trying to fill his master's shoes, but "Hermann" is no messiah.

No wonder the Prussian military leaders have to retain Hitler for a "front." In the end they will have to depend on the discipline of the German army. Their hopes can't be high, recalling the collapse of morale back in the days of old Kaiser Wilhelm in 1918.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Friday, Aug. 10, 1923.

Business was practically suspended in Mansfield and many went from here to Marion to attend funeral of President Harding.

Katherine Hartman, 561 Park avenue west, counted 650 automobiles passing her home in one hour.

Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Kenson were injured when their auto collided with street car on Park avenue west near Sycamore street.

Son was born to Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Doolittle, Springfield township; daughter to Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Williams, 27 High street.

Robert L. Nichols, Mansfield young man, opened law office in Citizens Loan building.

Annual picnic of church school of Grace Episcopal church was held at South park.

Richard O. Pugh, former Y. M. C. A. physical director here, was making success of insurance business in Warren.

Dave Boone Says:

DON'T spend recklessly. Save." That is a slogan urged by Butere, noted American banker. Only the people can bring on or prevent inflation, he warns. But, gosh, after more than ten years in which all the old-fashioned American traditions of thrift, economy and business sense have been knocked on the head by high example, this is going to be hard advice for the folks to follow.

You can get in bad these days even by a rumor you've been able to put something aside for a rainy day. And if there's any real evidence of it there's no telling what a mess you can get into.

A fellow who has always enjoyed the respect of his neighbors as an honest, well-meaning, high-class citizen can be ruined and disgraced by even a suspicion that he's been thrifty.

* * *

Yes sir, I know plenty of men and women who have lost face the last few years. They didn't dump money into the pari-mutuels, blow in their money or luxuries and talk of billions of dollars as though they were discussing house-flies. Consequently they felt the sting of widespread disapproval.

* * *

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

WELL the political party in Bridgeport which ran a "help wanted" ad for candidates for the next city election has really got something.

* * *

The business and professional backgrounds of some of our elected officials is simply appalling and if they had been asked to furnish references from their last employers they wouldn't have got the jobs.

* * *

Under our system an elected official can run up a red ink balance that looks like somebody spilled catsup on the ledgers.

* * *

And instead of being bounced, the first thing you know he's moved on to a bigger and better and more responsible job on government payroll.

The spend and spend and spend form of government has come right out of that system and the taxes that are paid in the sweat of man's brow have been dissipated and tossed into all sorts of crackpot ventures just because we don't ask the candidate, before he becomes the office-holder, to lay his money experience on the line.

* * *

If the Bridgeport group means to follow up its "help wanted" ad with an employment application covering the experience of prospective candidates, then it's really got something.

Thought for the day: No jobs for jerks.

Timely Editorial

Maybe, Mr. Morgenthau.

There was little encouragement for the American taxpayer in the prediction of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that his treasury experts will devise the 1944 tax program and present it to congress. The memories of the treasury experts' battle against the Ruml plan are too fresh to inspire complete confidence in Mr. Morgenthau's ability to devise sound and fair tax legislation.

Don't be too sure that you will write the next tax bill, Henry. The congress—and the people—may have something to say. They didn't get all of the Ruml plan, but they got a lot more of it than you ever wanted to give them. There was a time, remember, when you wanted to discard the whole idea of pay-as-you-go taxation and keep the old system. Your own treasury receipts for July will show you just how wrong you were.—Akron Beacon Journal.

Crash Emphasizes Army Delay In Developing Glider Program

WASHINGTON—When the city of St. Louis lost some of its top-ranking officials in the army glider crash of last week, the only good result was to open up an army-navy hair-pulling contest which has been brewing backstage for months.

What most people don't know is that (1) the entire U. S. glider program has been woefully neglected; (2) that the navy has developed a much better glider than the army; and (3) when one glider manufacturer last year asked the navy's permission to manufacture the navy's type glider for the Army, the navy refused.

The entire glider story goes back long before Pearl Harbor, even before the glider-borne invasion of Crete, when one lone army officer saw the importance of gliders and began to demand that the army develop them.

He is Col. Fred R. Dent, known in the Air Corps as the Billy Mitchell of gliders. At that time, and until the Germans showed what they could do with gliders in Crete, the U. S. Air Corps had turned thumbs down on this "air-toy." They were considered a nice sporting plaything, but of no military value. Brass-hats referred to them as those—gliders.

And it was Col. Dent, a young West Pointer, who argued, begged and hammered home the importance of the glider in landing troops, carrying freight, hauling extra fuel and doing all the things which gliders are now doing.

Note: According to Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, the advance in Sicily was hastened one week by the use of gliders. Actually the landing in Sicily began not on Saturday, July 10, but Friday, July 9 when glider-borne troops and paratroopers landed in the interior and completely disrupted communications.

* * *

Funds Delayed.

COL. DENT, unfortunately, was not able to win over the brasshats and get appropriations for gliders until every airplane factory in the country already was chockful of airplane orders.

As a result, Dent put together gliders wherever he could. A total of 115 different plants contributed different parts to army gliders and it was a joking remark around Wright Field that glider wings were "by Steinway."

Dent had persuaded the Pratt and Reed company, of Deep River, Conn., manufacturers of piano parts, to make certain parts for his gliders. The Gibson Refrigerator company at Greenville, Mich., also took on other parts. The Ford Plant at Iron Mountain, Mich., which previously made station wagons, the Jenter plant at Ridgefield, N. J., and various other factories were converted to the glider program.

On one occasion, a manufacturer from Minneapolis came in to say he had the backing of Northwest Airlines and that he wanted to make gliders. He got an order for sixty.

"What's the name of your company?" Col. Dent asked.

"I'll tell you in the morning," the embryo manufacturer replied, disclosing that he still had to form his company. This hurried throwing together of the glider program probably was the best that could be done considering its late start and the handicaps under which Dent was working.

Suddenly, however, Dent was relieved of his job. After taking all the miseries, and spending two thankless years pioneering for gliders, he was transferred overseas. In his place was appointed 26-year-old Dick duPont, scion of the famous duPont family.

Young duPont, head of All-American Aviation, had done a lot of experimenting with gliders and air mail pick-ups in cities not large enough for regular mail stops. He stepped in after Col. Dent had suffered most of the headaches, and is now carrying on.

Army-Navy Jealousy.

THE ARMY, necessarily anxious to build several thousand gliders for landing operations in Europe and build them immediately, had adopted the Waco type of glider.

Meanwhile the navy, working on a smaller scale and a little more slowly, adopted a more efficient type of glider, manufactured by Allied Aviation in Baltimore and Winston-Salem, N. C., and by Bristol Aero at West Haven, Conn.

The navy glider can be landed either on land or water, and according to official reports "generally has shown better performances than the glider which the army has placed in production."

Inside fact was that the Admirals themselves were not particularly interested in gliders, except indirectly for the marines. The navy itself does not land men as an attacking force, but carries marines for that purpose.

But for a time after the landing at Guadalcanal, when it looked a sif the marines would play an increasingly aggressive role in the war, the navy, acting as procurement agency for the marines, ordered a lot of these superior, amphibian gliders.

It was at about this time that Allied aviation asked the navy's permission to approach the army with a view to manufacturing its superior type glider for the army. But the navy said no. Since then, this negative position has been modified, but months later, when it was difficult to change.

Latest development is that quite recently the navy drastically curtailed its glider program, almost wiped it out. Net result of all this is that the army has been pushing production of the type of glider which crashed at St. Louis, while the navy has almost cut out production of a superior glider.

These are some of the glider problems which the Truman committee may investigate as a result of the tragic St. Louis crash.

Sicilians Regard Allies As Liberators; Grain-Threshing Done In Biblical Style.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—Our troops have found Sicily on the whole perhaps a little better than North Africa. Certainly the people are just as friendly, if not more so. So this whole thing seems kind of ridiculous, when you sit down and think about it.

Here these people are our enemies. They declared war on us. We had to come clear over here and fight them—and now that we're here they look upon us as their friends.

If anything, their attitude is more that of a liberated people than was the case in French North Africa, and they seem to look to us more eagerly for relief from their hunger. In several of the smaller mountain towns our troops were greated by signs saying "Welcome," in English, pasted on the walls of buildings, and American flags were fluttering from windows.

Of course there are some Sicilians who treat us as enemies. There has been some small sabotage, such as cutting our phone wires. But on the whole the Sicilians certainly are more for us than the Arabs of Africa were.

* * *

SICILY is really a beautiful country. Up here in the north it is all mountainous, and all but the most rugged of the mountains are covered with fields or orchards. Right now everything is dry and burned up, as we so often see our own Midwest in dry summers. They say this is the driest summer in years.

Our ceaseless convoys chew up the gravel roads, and the dust becomes suffocating, but in springtime Sicily must look like the Garden of Eden.

The land is wonderfully fertile. Sicilians would not have to be poor and starving if they were capable of organizing and using their land to its fullest.

DRIVING over Sicily you have a feeling of far greater antiquity than you get even from looking at the Roman ruins in North Africa. Towns sit right smack on the top of needle-point mountain peaks. They were built that way in the old days for protection. Today a motor car can't even get up to many of them.

The houses are of a cement-colored stone, and they so blend into the mountains that often you can't see a city at all from a few miles away.

In these mountain towns the streets are too narrow for vehicles, the passageways are dirty, and the goat and burro are common.

In the remotest and most ancient town you'll find that half the people have relatives in America, and there is always somebody popping up from behind every or around every corner who lived for 12 years in Buffalo or 30 years in Chicago.

Farming is still done in Biblical style. The grain-threshing season is now on, and how do you suppose they do it? Simply by tying three mules together and running them around in a small circle all day long while another fellow keeps throwing grain under their hoofs with a wooden pitchfork.

WE HIT Sicily in the middle of the fruit and vegetable season. The troops went for fresh tomatoes like sourdoughs going for gold in the Klondike. Tomatoes and watermelons. I've never seen so many watermelons in my life. They are mostly small round ones, and do they taste good to an old watermelon devourer like myself! Also we eat fresh peaches, grapes, figs and even mulberries.

At first when we hit a new town the people in their gratitude gave away their fruit to the troops. But it didn't take them long to learn, and soon they were holding out for trades of rations or other army stuff.

The people don't want money. When we ask them to work for us they say they will but that we must pay them in merchandise, not money.

The most sought-after thing is shoes. Most of the people are going around in sandals made of old auto tires. I believe you could take two dozen pairs of G. I. shoes and buy half the island of Sicily.

ODD FACT

In a 24 hour one-girl campaign, an 18-year-old girl worker in a defense plant collected enough small change from ehr fellow workers to buy a $1,000 war bond, which she presented to the government.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Wet August Day

THE NEIGHBOR'S cows were swimming in their pasture along Honey Creek today. The stream had risen out of its banks and spread all over the bottom. We heard the roar of it, from our cottage home at the foot of the hill.

From before daylight until after dark, the rain came down. I awoke to the crash and roar of an electrical storm, and remembered that I had left my car stand in the yard. So out I dashed, before the rooster's crow, and was just in time to get it safely into the garage before the downpour came, straight down in thimblefuls as it does in tropical climates.

The wetness did not pass with coming of daylight. The hills were steamy with fog. The heat was oppressive. All day, one lowering gray cloud after another came out of the west and doused its contribution upon our valley.

Our young boys, jubilant in bathing suits, did the morning chores then raced across the soybean field to see the creek. I watched them, with Sargent the dog, romping through the puddles. They returned with the awed report that the cows were swimming, and wading belly deep where they usually graze.

The floors of our house were wet from the drip, all day. So many feet going in and out cannot fail to bring outside and inside together. The air outside was so warm that the whole country smelled like a greenhouse.

The turkeys spent almost the whole day in their mesh-floored box. Once during a ten-minute sunshiny spell, they busied themselves with eating and drinking, then huddled together beneath the overhang, bewildered. Between showers we pulled weeds out of the potatoes. Even the big ones came out easily.

The corn felt the rain and reached on tiptoe to flaunt its first tender tassels. The soybeans waved and nodded and grew greener.

Tomatoes ripened on the vine, sweet potatoes spread over the garden, celery has almost reached bunch size.

Rain in the city may be as wet, but not as joy-bringing. While it would dampen the grain yet unharvested, the field beans, corn and the pasture become more thrifty. It means more feed for stock and more abundant food when it will fill the greatest need.
